One Head Cut Off
Luxury for Rockefeller
6 Women, All Different

Ingenious Ethiopian warriors hid in a deep pit, concealed by shrubbery. Italian planes swooped low, seeking the enemy. The Ethiopians sprang out, and their rifle volley brought down one of the planes with three Italians.

Two dashed into the brush, where thirst or wild animals probably will get them. The third was captured, his head, cut off and stuck on the end of a pole, is now exhibited in the town of Daggah Bur, for all the world to see and learn that Ethiopians can conquer Italians.

This incident will build up enthusiasm for Mussolini's war, and one man more or less means little. Cutting off the head is not an Ethiopian idea.

A certain French official, tired of hearing the poor complain about the lack of bread, suggested that they eat grass. The Bastile fell, revolution came, the people got that official, cut off his head, and mounted it on a pike, his mouth stuffed full of grass.

Long before that, when Cromwell was safely dead and Charles the Second came crawling back, the brave royalty that had run away and stayed away from the lying lion, dug up Cromwell's body, cut off what was left of his head and stuck it up on London bridge on a pike to warn traitors.

Such is the nature of man. General De Coulaincourt, in his interesting reminiscences of Napoleon at Moscow and on the road home, says Napoleon reminded him of the saying of a Roman emperor, "The dead body of an enemy always smells sweet."

Cutting off that one head of an Italian flier, natural enough after barbarian tribesmen, helpless on the ground, had been bombed from the air, will cause many more Ethiopian bombings.

It will put an end to any doubt Mussolini may have had as to the advisability of bombing Addis Ababa.

Good news as the year dies is announced by the Rockefeller Institute. A nose wash that protects monkeys from infantile paralysis. It has worked successfully on our little monkey cousins, will work presumably on men, and is simple, inexpensive.

Important to parents is the positive announcement by the Rockefeller Institute that the germ of infantile paralysis enter the bodies of children only through the nose.

This emphasizes the importance of training children NEVER to put their fingers to their noses, obeying a Chinese proverb, which says, "Never pick your nose or your ear except with your elbow."

As John D. Rockefeller, 96 years old, naturally interested in finishing his 100th year and perhaps some others, sits in the winter sunlight of the South, it must please him to remember occasionally that millions earned when he was young are fighting disease in children and adults all over the world in his great Institute on Manhattan Island, in far away China, in Central America, where his scientists are working to extirpate yellow fever once and for all.

"GIVE light and the people will find their own way."

Contemplation of useful work that he has been able to do, giving back hundreds of millions to the country that gave him opportunity, is the only remaining luxury of Mr. Rockefeller's life, which has never been luxurious, or even remotely self-indulgent.

For his Christmas dinner he ate at most a few ounces of plainest food, carefully selected. His wise doctors know it is what you do NOT put into your stomach that insures good health.

Nothing could be truer than the French saying, Bouche femme varie, "Often women are different." Study a few differences. New York Mrs. Reisman, only 35, made old by doing housework while her husband was poor, got rich and is pretty, young secretary living in the house with them and very tired of hearing her husband tell the secretary how much he loved her.

Mrs. Reisman killed the secretary; a jury of twelve men, eleven married, one single, convicted her, recommended mercy and she goes free.

A different type is Mrs. Alice Hayden, of Chicago, only 26 years old, her husband also 23. He fell in love with an 18-year-old high school girl. The wife, in the presence of the girl, asked her husband, "Which do you like better?" When the husband chose the high school girl, she said:

"Then I will give you your

SHOE MEN PLEAD FOR GOODWIN

EX-GOVERNOR WILL DECLINE, FRIENDS SAY

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP)—Alfred E. Smith has been invited to be a guest of President and Mrs. Roosevelt when he comes to Washington to address the American Liberty League dinner, January 25.

The invitation was sent a week ago, but as yet the former governor and critic of the New Deal has not replied. At his office in New York, no comment was forthcoming other than an acknowledgment of its receipt.

It was generally expected among his close associates, however, that Smith would not be a White House guest, but would stop at his usual hotel or return to New York after the dinner.

The invitation was sent to the 1928 Democratic Presidential candidate by Mrs. Roosevelt and was in the customary style of such overnight invitations to the White House.

FLANNED ATTACK

It occasioned some surprise from close friends of Smith in view of published reports that the former governor would attack the administration in his Liberty League speech.

Smith is a charter member of the Liberty League, assailant of most of the New Deal's actions and legislation. When he was editor of the New Outlook, he was a frequent critic of the administration of the man who nominated him for the Presidency at Houston in '28 and characterized him as the "Happy Warrior."

On one occasion, Smith used the expression "baloney dollars" to describe the Roosevelitan devaluation of the dollar.

BACKS LEAGUE

While he has made no comment on the New Deal in recent months, publicly at least, it is no secret that he is ardently opposed to the Roosevelt program and has been in accord with the Liberty League's caustic criticism of the administration.

His address at the league's dinner will be his first direct entrance expression "baloney dollars" to delivered several speeches, lukewarm and half-hearted, in Roosevelt's behalf in the 1932 campaign.

For a time, after Smith's candidacy was blasted at the Chicago convention, the former governor was completely outside the camp of the New Dealers; but at the insistence of such Democratic leaders as Bernard M. Baruch, he was induced to make a few speeches in the East.

But since March, 1933, his ways and those of the Roosevelt administration have widely parted.

STUDENTS FOR 'ACTION'

Columbus, O., Dec. 28 (US)—Radical students from all over the country, here to form a new "United Front" organization, applauded last night when a speaker noted the absence of the American flag in the Y. W. C. A. assembly hall, where the meetings are being held.

With accord between the different student groups near, Leo Kryschi, veteran Amalgamated Clothing Workers' official, addressing the 600 students delegates from 125 colleges, spoke of the absence of the Stars and Stripes and added:

"Let Hearst's agents, and they are here too, report that. And let Hearst print that in his papers."

LAVAL GUARDED AGAINST RIOTS

Copyright, 1935, Associated Press

Paris, Dec. 28—Steel-helmeted mobile guards, with carbines swung on their shoulders, were held in readiness for possible disorders today outside the Chamber of Deputies as Premier Laval's Cabinet faced the danger of overthrow in a Chamber vote on his foreign policy.

Small crowds that gathered outside were kept moving by large forces of police, as the mobile guards posted themselves in the shelter of the nearby railroad station.

As the time for voting approached, noise and excitement increased in the Chamber to such a point that the President was frequently forced to hold up the session in order to restore order.

SHIP SABOTAGE ARREST NEAR

Secret and intensive investigation by G-men into the $200,000 sabotage on the U. S. cruiser Quincy, Dec. 7, is approaching a climax, it was learned today.

The climax, expected within a few days, may result in the arrest of one, possibly two men, both suspected Reds, it was said.

Both department of justice investigators and naval intelligence officers have been checking the personnel of the Fore River shipyards night and day since the electric gear machinery was ruined when a loose steel nut "fell" into it.

NOT AN ACCIDENT

Despite official denials, issued on several occasions since the affair, it was learned the U. S. navy has never considered the "accident" anything else but deliberate sabotage.

The sabotage story was told ex-

KIDNAP HOAX CONFESSED BY MILNE

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—Caleb J. Milne, 4th, "kidnaped himself as a matter of publicity to help him get a job on the stage," J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, announced today.

"He broke shortly after midnight," Hoover said, "and told us the whole story of how he had conceived the idea when he was in desperate financial straits and couldn't get a job."

The youth, grandson of a wealthy retired Pennsylvania textile manufacturer, and son of a Boston man, was arrested by the federal agents at Hoover's direction, and held "somewhere in New York city."

Young Milne, Hoover said, faked a story to his landlady that a "Dr. Green of Gracie square" wanted him to go to Philadelphia because his grandfather was ill.

He cut words from newspapers to form a $20,000 "ransom" note, which he mailed to his family in a box containing his wrist watch and a newspaper he had touched with blood.

HID IN JERSEY

Then Milne went by bus to Trenton, N. J., where he remained for about four days. Finally he moved on to Doylestown, Pa., on Dec. 18.

"He went up by a schoolhouse,

Two persons were driven out by fire in a lodging house at 275 Columbus avenue, Soutr End, today.

Flames spread after a fireplace on the third floor of the four story brick structure collapsed and hot bricks fell into a living room.

The fire raced to the roof in partitions, filling the building with smoke.

All occupants had reached the street when firemen arrived. The firemen donned gas masks to battle the flames.

Alluring Ida Lupino is expected to be called again before the grand jury investigating the mysterious death of Thelma Todd. It was indicated that Miss Lupino will repeat her testimony concerning the latest romance in the beautiful Lawrence girl's life. Despite continued investigation, the secret of Thelma's death is still unsolved. (Story on Page 4.)

GUN-TOTER ARRESTS NUMBER 75 IN YEAR

Seventy-five persons who carry guns illegally, each branded by police as a potential killer, have been arrested during the past year.

This was disclosed at police headquarters today as Massachusetts' anti-crime crusade swept into its second phase with officials ready to crack down onthe indiscriminate issuance of licenses to sell firearms.

The move was inspired by Police Commissioner Eugene M. McSweeny of Boston and Colonel Paul G. Kirk, commissioner of public safety, who have cooperated in drafting a plan to catalogue every gun and gun toter in the state.

Included in the new line of action is a checkup of every dealer licensed to sell firearms, and an appeal to city and town licensing officials to scrutinize firearms dealers in their districts pending enactment of statewide legislation.

NIP CRIME NI BUD

In making public figures of arrest for illegal possession of firearms, officials revealed that in several instances the gun toters

Curley at Home With Heavy Cold

The Governor, for the past several days, had defied his physician's orders to remain at home.

FIVE UNIONS ASK CURLEY TO RETAIN AUTO CHIEF

Five unions of the Brockton Brotherhood of Shoe and Allied Craftsmen rallied to the aid of Frank A. Goodwin today.

Four of the unions passed resolutions protesting Governor Curley's threat to remove Goodwin from his motor vehicles registry post and appealed to the governor to reconsider.

A fifth local sent a telegram to the governor declaring that Goodwin, as a "public servant", had rendered valuable serjice in his labor activities.

The telegram concluded that it was "un-American" for the governor to remove Goodwin as registrar, if he so contemplates.

The five unions represent some 2000 shoe and leather workers.

STILL DEFIANT

Meanwhile Goodwin was standing pat on his defiance to the Governor's order to quit his labor activities. The Governor himself had no comment to make, for the moment, on the registrar's stand.

Following a conference with Governor Curley at the State House where the ultimatum was delivered, Goodwin asked for a couple of hours to consider.

His answer was that he refused to give up his right of free speech, and that he would "reserve for myself the right to take any stand or express any opinion that I thought was for the good of a cause in which I was interested."

Goodwin insisted he is "more interested in the welfare of the retary of the Ohio State Y. W. C. A., presided at the meeting.

COMMUNISTS PUSH PLANKS TO UNANIMOUS ADOPTION

Meanwhile, the new organization of radical students, to be known as the American Student Union, was in the final stages of formation as Communist and Socialist leaders exacted a pledge from delegates to affirm the action.

The Communist National Student League yesterday adopted the proposed platform of the new organization without a dissenting vote.

But at the closed session of the Socialistic Student League for Industrial democracy, there was evidence of a split, a some delegates suggested that the Socialistic principles of their group were to be absorbed by the Communistic elements dominating the proposed union.

Leaders circumvented the situation by leaving the motion to adopt the proposed platform over until today and with a pledge to support whatever action a majority of the delegates may take.

LEADERS CONFIDENT

The pledge was given unanimously and the meeting adjourned with leaders confident that today's vote would favor amalgamation with the National Student League and metamorphosis of the two organizations into the new Student Union, carrying with them all other radical and "liberal" units on the campuses of American universities and high schools.

A four-point program of the new union consisted of the following, which may be amended in final form:

1—We demand the right to education and employment in the United States.

2—We demand peace be maintained and that all preparations for war be immediately suspended.

EQUALITY DEMAND

3—We demand academic freedom be defended and reactionary tendencies in the educational institutions of the United States be destroyed.

4—We demand equality of all regardless of race, color or creed and, particularly, elimination of discrimination against the Negro.

The program of the new union definitely sidestepped an issue which for a time threatened to endanger the new organization. This was centered on the war platform.

The Student League for industrial democracy, a Socialistic group, has insisted on opposition to all wars in which the United States may engage, while the National Student League, a Communistic group, has been committed to a "defend the Soviet Union" policy.

Joseph H. Lash of New York, national secretary of the S. L. I. D., and Serrill Gerber, holding a similar position with the N. S. L., both insist that "all differences will be wiped out by the time our fusion meeting is held Saturday."

In the meantime American officials and representatives of other patriotic groups have lodged vigorous protests against the use of the Y. W. C. A. rooms for the convention.

Ernest A. Grabiel, chairman of the Franklin County Chapter of the American Legion, has protested to the Y. W. C. A. trustees against offering a haven to the groups with "Communistic tendencies" which were barred from meeting at the Ohio State University.

Milton D. Campbell, of Cincinnati, commander of the state legion, notified local officers to "observe" the convention and its actions and prepare for a showdown, when a state Americanism meeting is held here on January 15 and 16.

Carl Lauterbach, director of the George W. Todd Union at the University of Rochester, and national president of the Association of College Unions representing students' organizations in 100 colleges, hurried here to protest against the use of the title "American Student Union." He said:

"Use of that title would be misleading and might incriminate some of the organizations of loyal Americans who make up that group. It would confuse us in the public mind. We are non-political, and we know, as does the public, that the N. S. L. and the S. L. I. D. have a definitely political complexion"

It became known today that a militant student organization composed of loyal Americans who did and will support the R. O. T. C. and uphold the American Flag and the Constitution, is being formed here, with the Ohio State university students and alumni as a nucleus.

They plan, one of them indicated, to "trade blow for blow" with the proposed radical students "where matters of Americanism are involved.

Death Takes the Wheel

A FEW minutes' time is worth very little, measured in terms of eternity. A life is priceless. And who can count the cost of a crippled body?

The automobile is a boon to humanity. It has made life pleasanter, more exhilarating, broader. BUT IT HAS SNUFFED OUT INNUMERABLE LIVES AND RUINED MANY HOMES.

According to Lewis E. McBrayne, general manager of the Massachusetts Safety Council, there is not one family in Massachusetts which has not had some relative involved in a motor accident.

The state's death toll for the current year is 788. This is a decrease from the 921 of last year. But the number of persons injured increased from 43,603 to 48,334, a large number of them permanently injured.

DEATH RIDES AT THE WHEEL OF TOO MANY CARS. The startling story behind the cold statistics will be unfolded in TOMORROW'S BOSTON SUNDAY ADVERTISER AND ON SUCCEEDING DAYS, IN THE BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN.

New Year's is a time for good resolutions. No matter who you are, you can drive with even greater care than you may now use; you can refrain from speeding to save two or three minutes; you can watch children on the sidewalks as well as in the streets. You can give the other fellow more than an even break.

There are three more days in 1935. NOW IS THE TIME TO RESOLVE TO DRIVE WITH EXTREME CARE. No need to wait until your number-plates are changed. BEGIN TODAY and you will not have to count the cost of a few minutes saved.

THE winter months are the "killing months." Pedestrians move more slowly, especially the aged. Automobiles do not stop so quickly or change direction so fast as when the tires "bite" the pavement.

The driving strain is greater. It gets dusk earlier. The hazards multiply. Even "moderate speed" is too fast under wintry conditions.

Children may run into the street at any time. Efforts are being made ceaselessly to make them more cautious. But if they are thoughtless, death or injury is too much to deal them for their childish mistakes.

Take nothing for granted. The child, the pedestrian, the driver of the other car, may make a mistake. Be prepared for it.

Another Child Lies Dying

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

On Christmas Day, three-year-old Alice Mears screamed in agony on a New York hospital operating table while grim-faced surgeons, unable to administer ether, worked desperately to save her life. Another child victim of a hit-and-run driver. The same tragic story—reckless driving—a moment of horror—and then the coward's escape. Judges should make drivers convicted of serious traffic violations study this picture.

RUN THE AUTO; DON'T LET THE AUTO RUN YOU.

START your journeys earlier; allow more time to reach your destination, both summer and winter. Take the uncrowded routes.

Keep your car operating efficiently, especially the brakes.

Watch the roadsides in outlying sections.

Look out for fog, mist and snow. When you cannot see a sufficient distance ahead, stop or proceed with extreme caution. Keep your windshield clear, the whole way across.

Never back your car, if you can avoid it. Scores of children have been killed or injured that way. Countless accidents occur in driveways.

Beware of intersections!

CUT THE COST, IN HUMAN LIVES AND SUFFERING.

LAVAL CABINET SHAKEN OVER ITALY'S WAR

Copyright, 1935, the Associated Press

Paris, Dec. 28—Premier Pierre Laval's grip on government power weakened today, under renewed attacks on his foreign policy, in bitter Chamber of Deputies debate.

The Laval cabinet hung by a parliamentary thread so slender that doubt arose in chamber lobbies even that a narrow vote of confidence would save it and permit the premier to tackle the problem of peace between Italy and Ethiopia again.

Predictions of the Premier's majority fell from around 25 to 10 votes, which some informed sources said might cause Laval to resign after the parliament vote on the balanced budget, on which the franc's safety from devaluation is staked.

Laval was represented as being unwilling to return to Geneva in the face of the heavy hostility against his policy toward Italy, which his chamber critics called "weak."

Even moderate deputies joined the leftists, as the second day of the foreign policy debate started today, in urging the Premier to adopt a "clear stand" for application of eLague of Nations pressure against Italy.

With a vote early tonight in prospect on a question of confidence to follow the discussion of Laval's policies to prevent the Italo-Ethiopian war from kindling a European conflagration, the cabinet appeared obviously shaken.

Italians Driven Back in North, Foes Claim

Addis Ababa, Dec. 28 (AP)—An Ethiopian government communique reported today Abbi Addi, 25 miles west of the main northern lines, was captured by the Ethiopians in a surprise attack, which drove back the Italian native troops.

The bodies of 20 Italian officers and many natives, fighting for the Italian side, were reported found on the battlefield in the sector where the Ethiopian forces have been waging an intensive campaign to quell a revolt.

The communique said 100 of Italy's native soldiers were taken prisoners.

Rome Makes Slight Reference to Battle

Rome, Dec. 28 (AP) — Italian aerial squadrons bombed Ethiopian detachments yesterday while skirmishes persisted on the northern front, an official communique said today.

"One of our columns, while reconnoitering, had small clashes with adversary troops in the zone southeast of Afaga Fass," the government announcement said.

"Aviation was extended its bombardment operations to hostile groups in the Takkaze region (west of the main northern front) and the Ambs Alaji sector (south of the main northern lines).

"December 22, in fighting at Abbi Addi, the 22nd Eritrean battalion particularly distinguished itself."

Reports from Asmara, Eritrea, said the Ethiopians were routed after a battle late Thursday near Afaga Fass, in the Takkaze area, where the Italians claimed two previous victories.

Spanish Cabinet to Meet Monday

Madrid, Dec. 28 (AP)—Premier Manuel Portela Valladares has summoned his cabinet to meet Monday to decide whether Spain shall send the use of its ports to Great Britain in the event of an Anglo-Italian war in the Mediterranean, and whether the moment is opportune for dissolution of parliament.

BREAK WITH SOVIET

U. S. May Follow Uruguay Lead

Washington, Dec. 28 (INS)—The United States government will follow the lead of Uruguay in severing diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia if Moscow fails to respect its non-propaganda pledges to this country.

This was made plain in authoritative quarters here today as officials were with keen interest Uruguay's action, brought to a head because Moscow had made Montevideo the headquarters for the spread of Communistic propaganda in South America.

Hope was expressed in official quarters that Moscow would heed Uruguay's action as a warning of what this government will do if the Soviets again flagrantly violated their non-propaganda pledges to the United States.

Violation of those pledges nearly cost the Soviet regime American recognition last August. Communist agitators at the Third International in Moscow had urged the American Communist party to stir up discontent among workers in this country.

Moscow's reply to a formal protest from the government was a denial it had made any pledges concerning the activities of the Third International.

Assailing this denial as a "clean-cut disavowal" of the Soviet government's pledges to this government, Secretary of State Cordell Hull warned that any further violation of those pledges would result in "the most serious consequences" to the friendly and official relations between the two countries.

Soviet Envoy Linked With Brazilian Revolt

Montevideo, Dec. 28 (INS)—Publishing "further revelations of Soviet subversive activities" in South America, the government newspaper El Pueblo today stressed the charge that before the second Brazilian revolt, Soviet Minister Alexander Minkin issued "bazes" checks totaling $250,000, some of which were "eventually traced to persons connected with the Brazilian uprising."

At the same time Minkin, who was given a passport after Uruguay broke off relations with the Soviet Union yesterday, issued a brief statement denying allegations that his ministry was the center of continent-wide Communistic activities.

"The Soviet legation is entirely innocent of the charges," said the minister. "We are utterly taken by surprise at the Uruguayan decision to cut off relations."

freedom, so you can marry her."

She walked sadly into her bedroom, knelt beside the crib of her 18-months-old baby, shot herself through the heart. You cannot add to that without spoiling it.

At Memphis, Tenn., three women, strangers to each other, decided on the same day that life was not worth while. All three took poison, found themselves in the same hospital ward. Two prayed that they might die, the third, denouncing herself as "a fool," prayed that she might live.

She died, the two that prayed for death recovered.

A sadder story of a woman's death than any of the others, since so much sorrow must have preceded it, is told briefly by police.

A young woman, called a "night-life blonde" in reporter's jargon, said to have been named "Mollie" or "Malloy," was described by detectives as "a frequenter of taverns and bars." Who she was no one knew.

She disappeared for a day or two. Then a boy playing in a cellar saw a woman's hand with nails brightly manicured and colored sticking out from a pile of rubbish. The medical examiner said she had received severe blows on the head and her body had been "slashed with some sharp instrument, deep enough and long enough to cause death."

Communists Use 'Y' Centers For Spread of Propaganda

Columbus, O., Dec. 28 (US)—The action of the Columbus Y. W. C. A. in housing the "United Front" student convention which has been barred from the campus of the Ohio State University, is in accord with the "program for American youth" adopted by the Young Communist League of America in June, 1934.

The Columbus meeting called to form the American Student Union, it is revealed, is an outgrowth of the policy of the Communist International to win over the youth of the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. to "the revolutionary class struggle."

For several years local Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. institutions throughout the country have been used as centers for Communistic propaganda disguised as anti-war activity.

CONFIRMED IN PROGRAM

This is confirmed by the "Program for the American Youth," the manifesto of the young Communist League which says:

"The work started in a few cities and Y's . . . shows us the tremendous possibilities in making these organizations our strongholds."

Many Communist agitators have availed themselves in various colleges of the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. facilities placed at their disposal by officials.

Today the Columbus Y. W. C. A. is providing shelter to the "American Student Union." A year ago the Student League for Industrial Democracy smuggled its annual national convention onto the Campus of Northwestern University.

Without the knowledge of President Walter Dill Scott, the secretary of the University Y. M. C. A., Claude C. Shott, made arrangements for that convention.

MEET IN LOS ANGELES

In May, 1935, the central Y. W. C. A. in Los Angeles was the meeting room of the planning committee of the regional conference of the American Youth Congress, in which Communists figured prominently.

One of the principal speakers at the Los Angeles conference was Waldo McNutt, claiming to represent the Rocky Mountain district of the Y. M. C. A. Said Mr. McNutt from the public platform:

"Often we are asked why we do not fight against Communism. The Communists have always been in sympathy with our program."

The University of Minnesota has so far provided an outstanding example of preventing the Y. M. C. A. on the campus from becoming a center of revolutionary activity by causing a change in the personnel directing the activities of the Y. M. C. A.

Previously, the University of Nebraska had taken similar action in securing the "resignation" of its Y. M. C. A. secretary.

The Communist Party has recently inaugurated an intensive drive to penetrate the religious youth organizations of the country, and has been making considerable headway.

CLAIM BIG FOLLOWING

The Communist-controlled National Student League and the Socialist Student League for Industrial Democracy "have each gained a large following in the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. groups, and on college campuses all over America," according to Mary W. Hillyer, national secretary of the League for Industrial Democracy.

These gains are admittedly responsible for the present merger of the two student bodies around the banner of "The American Student Union" now being consummated under the roof of the Y. W. C. A. in Columbus.

The link between the Communist organizations and the religious youth bodies was forged by the Young Communist League, member of the Communist Youth International, at the commencement of the "United Front" campaign sponsored by Moscow.

CURLEY DEFIED BY GOODWIN

thousands of shoe workers than in the registry position."

Goodwin's break with Governor Curley brought a stir of comment today from leaders of both the Republican and Democratic parties.

SEE CANDIDACY

The Republicans, however, through Representative Philip G. Bowker of Brookline, saw what Bowker declared was the apparent candidacy of Goodwin on an independent ticket in the Senate race to weaken the Republican candidate and strengthen the chances of Curley for election in the event that he runs.

This remark by Representative Bowker brought a quick, sharp answer from the registrar, who said:

"So far as Bowker is concerned he is the Republican clown, a sort of jester for the Republican State Committee, and nobody pays any attention to him."

Goodwin's latest predicament was brought on by his refusal to cease his activities as an unpaid adviser for the Brotherhood of Shoe and Allied Craftsmen.

Protests were made to the governor from Haverhill, after Goodwin's speech there Thursday night urging shoe workers in that city to join the Brockton Brotherhood rather than the Boot and Shoe Workers Union.

DISMISSAL ALTERNATIVE

Critics accused Goodwin of going to Haverhill as a state official and using his position to make an "un-American and anti-labor attack on the trade union."

As a result Goodwin was called before the governor and told that he must cease his union activities. He was told that the alternative was dismissal as registrar.

Goodwin's latest battle is the third in which he has been involved with governors.

When former Governor Ely took office Goodwin was chairman of the Finance Commission, but after several disputes with Ely he was demoted as chairman, and when his term of office expired Ely failed to reappoint him.

LAVA PERIL SLACKENS

Army Bombs Slow River of Fire

Hilo, Hawaii, Dec. 28 (AP)—Mauna Loa's fiery river of lava slowed down early today after a bombardment by army aviators who sought to divert its threatening flow.

Dr. Thomas A. Jaggar, government volcanologist, said the lava was moving at one-fourth its speed of yesterday, but he was unable to determine if the change was caused by twenty 600-pound bombs hurled from circling planes in a unique experiment.

From his lookout on the side of the mountain, Dr. Jaggar reported the molten rock, a menace to Hilo's water supply, was creeping along 120 to 200 feet an hour.

The bombing planes stood fueled and loaded, ready for a third attack upon the flaming mountain should it be necessary.

Ten bombs were dropped upon the river and the volcano itself Friday morning and 10 more in the afternoon. Thin pillars of black smoke arising from the mountainside were the only effects visible from here.

The flow has advanced to within 15 miles of Hilo and about four miles of the city's water reservoirs.

W. H. Sargeant Dies Under Knife

Her husband, William Friary, two sons and two daughters survive. One son is George Friary, manager of the M & P Theater in Chelsea.

2 DYING, 3 HURT IN CRASHES

A man and a women were dying, and three others suffering injuries that may leave them disfigured for life as a result of two accidents in Greater Boston in which both machines were demolished.

She was riding in a machine operated by Helding Carlson, of Granite street, Quincy, when the car struck a telegraph pole on Blue Hill road, Milton.

The impact of the crash pushed the engine far back into the car, threw Mrs. Donahue against the windshield, and then into the rear of the car.

DRIVER HELD

Unconscious, she was removed from the wreckage to the hospital where her name was placed on the danger list. Carlson, who miraculously escaped injury, was arrested on a charge of drunkenness, and will appear in Quincy district court today.

A similar accident befell four youths at Winchester where they were engulfed from their machine after it overturned from striking a curbing while rounding the corner from Forest street to Washington street.

BADLY CUT

Fred J. Baker, of Carlton terrace, Lynn, driver of the machine, suffering severe cuts, was arrested on charges of operating under the influence of liquor and driving without a license.

Most seriously injured was one of the occupants, Charles Baxter, 21, of Essex street, Lynn, whose name was on the danger list at Winchester, suffering a possible fracture of the skull and multiple injuries. He was picked up at the scene unconscious.

The other two victims, Richard Tibbets, of Essex street, Swampscott and John Cameron, 20, of Wakefield avenue, Lynn, were treated for cuts and bruises and possible internal injuries.

LINDYS May End Trip BY AIR

PLANE WAITS IN IRELAND

Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press.

Belfast, Ireland, Dec. 28—A possibility that Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh and his family may leave the freighter American Importer on its arrival in Ireland and complete their journey from the United States to England by plane developed today.

It was learned that a plane was standing by at the Aldergrove Royal Air Force airdrome under sealed orders as the vessel in which the Lindberghs left New York early last Sunday pushed through heavy winter seas nearer Ireland.

Officers at the airdrome admitted the plane was waiting but said they did not know for whose use it was intended.

The American Importer generally calls at Belfast only on its westbound voyage, but a possible re-routing might have been made to permit the Lindberghs—the only passengers aboard— to disembark here.

Press Friendly

London, Dec. 28 (AP)—Fresh manifestations of sympathy for the family of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh appeared in the British press today as the freighter American Importer, bearing the famous flier, his wife and child, united through Atlantic breakers toward the British Isles.

Renewing expressions of commiseration over the lot of the Lindberghs, some sections of the British press saw evidences that their departure from the United States might have a happier result—a drive against American criminal elements.

The Daily Express, recalling that free-born Englishmen who "would not have been able to abide oppression here" sailed for America on the Mayflower 315 years ago, said:

"Uncle Sam need look no further for his New Year's resolution than to cleanse his great action of its scum."

The Daily Mirror said, "There is nothing more terrible than the Lindbergh tragedy," but added:

"There is at least one hopeful side to the forced exile of this unhappy family.

"It has united a great majority of decent, law-abiding American citizens against the criminal element.

"Indignation has reached such a pitch that a 'clean-up,' will begin in real earnest."

Hoffman Puzzled

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 28 (AP)—Attorney General David T. Wilentz, who prosecuted Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the Lindbergh baby slaying, may be asked to pass upon Governor Harold G. Hoffman's authority to grant the condemned man a reprieve.

The Governor expresses belief that his authority to defer execution of Hauptmann, should the court of pardons deny him clemency, might have expired about May 13, 1936.

The state constitution provides for executive reprieve longer time within 90 days after "conviction." Hauptmann was convicted at Flemington last February 13.

The Governor said he might ask the attorney-general to determine whether "conviction" meant the jury's verdict or the end of all legal moves by a condemned man's counsel in the higher courts.

The problem, the governor said, might also be presented to the pardons court, when it convenes Monday.

'LOVE RECLUSE' SCORNED MEN AFTER BROKEN MARRIAGE

VICTORIAN ARISTOCRAT LEFT RICHES TO CHARITY

When this picture of Mrs. Grace Fletcher Kelley, South End eccentric recluse, was taken the Civil War had ended only a few years before. This lovely classic beauty of a quieter age for 60 years scorned the outside world as the result of a shattered romance.

This regal coat of arms was presented to her family in 1473 by King Edward IV of England. Her father was Israel Webster Kelley, collector of customs under President Harrison. Living the life of an absolute recluse, maintaining contact with only a few persons, the world-at-large little knew that she possessed a fortune estimated at over a quarter million.

Graceful belle of an earlier day, Mrs. Grace Fletcher Kelley in this old-fashioned daguerreotype is a symbol of a femininity now gone forever. She and her husband parted two days following their marriage for reasons never fully divulged. Even her few intimates believed her to be a spinster.

POND Agriculture NEXT

IDEA STARTED IN CAMBRIDGE

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—A new kind of agriculture, building little ponds of water in which bacteria will make vegetable gums useful in many commercial products, was described today to the society of American bacteriologists.

The gum raising can be done indoors in shallow tanks equally well. One kind of gum which J. R. Sanborn of Arthur D. Little, Inc., of Cambridge, Mass., described is costing only one cent a pound.

"In the increasing uses of vegetable gums," Sanborn told the section of agricultural and industrial bacteriology, "a definite place appears for some of the gummy products formed by micro organisms.

"The tough pellicles produced by several species have already been used in the manufacture of commercially valuable products, including leathery, rubbery as well as transparent sheet materials. Many types may be manipulated to provide mucilaginous surfaces or for finely divided coating materials."

Don't Dry Up

An advantage of the bacteria-made gums is a tendency not to dry out. Germs suggested for pond agriculture are named mucor, rhizopus, penicillium, trichoderma, clidium, and polyporaceae. Cellulose-forming bacteria also are good gum makers.

The ponds are about 90 per cent water. Added as food for the germ buga are wastes such as sulphite liquor, blackstrap molasses, distillery slop, wood residues, vegetable mashes and corn syrup.

The poison which causes diphtheria has been isolated by Monroe D. Eaton of Yale University School of Medicine, he said, although its nature and properties are not yet completely analyzed.

He said the poison appears to be a protein made by the diphtheria bacillus, and has a more complex structure than the substances from which the germ forms it.

The results of the work indicate, he reported, that both the immunizing and the destructive effects of the diphtheria poison are due to the single substance.

PARALYSIS SPRAY

Nasal Solution Tried on Monkeys

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Washington, Dec. 28 (US)—An "anti-infantile paralysis" nasal spray solution, found to be 92 per-cent effective in experiments with rhesus monkeys, has been developed by Dr. Charles Armstrong of the United States Public Health Service.

In an official document soon to be published, the Public Health Service—which warned doctors recently that two anti-paralysis vaccines in use were "dangerous"—will notify the public that Dr. Armstrong has discovered what he believes to be an almost wholly effective preventive of the dread disease.

The nasal spray solution, which contains common table salt and another simple chemical ingredient not yet disclosed but said to be quite inexpensive, was developed by Dr. Armstrong after a year's research. Dr. Armstrong is known also for his research into psittacosis (parrot fever) and sleeping sickness.

The unnamed chemical, which officials of the health service declined to disclose pending publication of Dr. Armstrong's report which his superiors have approved, was said to be so inexpensive that enough for 1000 nasal spray solutions can be bought for a penny.

SMOKE KILLED LOVE

Recluse Bared Divorce Cause

Out of the dust at the eerie home of Grace Fletcher Kelley, South End recluse who died Monday leaving a hoard of $250,000 to charity, came new stories today, clearing up some of the mysteries of her strange career.

Uppermost concerned the divorce from the man whom she married when a girl in her teens, and over whom, it is believed, she secluded herself for more than half a century.

It was because he smoked cigarettes that their romance died almost as it budded, she once revealed to Johnny Proctor, 14-year-old English high school freshman, who ran errands for her.

Proctor said that she once remarked:

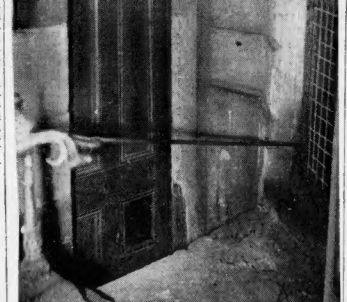

"I divorced my husband because he smoked cigarettes," and she coupled this explanation with a warning to Johnny to abstain from the smoking habit.

But whatever happened to the husband, John C. Goodwin, is still a mystery. Apparently she never went beyond the explanation of the divorce to reveal what befell him after they separated.

Meanwhile a search for possible living relatives of the woman was under way, with a report that some may be living in the town of Salisbury.

Miss Kelley was a relative of Daniel Webster, and there was a possibility that some of the descendants of Israel Webster Kelley, her father might still be alive, ready to come forward to claim some part of the fortune she left.

How successful they might be in their claims, however, was much of a problem, inasmuch as the greater part of her estate was willed to charitable institutions, including the Massachusetts General Hospital and the Morgan Memorial.

(All pictures from International News Photograph Service)

2 Probes Underway As Crash Hurts 13

Two probes were being conducted today into the crash of a Boston Elevated bus and a truck at West Seventh and D streets, which which caused injuries to 13 persons.

Special Officer Michael J. Roche of the South Boston police station and Inspector Max Jacobs of the registry of motor vehicles were the officers attempting to fix the blame for the crash.

As the heavily laden truck, driven by Russell H. Sherman of Mattapoisett, police said, crashed with the bus, the crowded bus smashed into an electric arc light pole, knocking it off at the base.

The pole fell and struck Miss Domicela Adukonis, 16, of West Seventh street, who had just alighted from the bus. She was taken to City hospital with a concussion of the brain.

Three other passengers of the bus were confined to the hospital with injuries, while ten others were treated by family physicians.

Miss Davies' New Film Offers Jobs

By HARRISON CARROLL
Copyright, 1935, by International News Service

Hollywood, Dec. 28—If you look like Thomas Jefferson at the age of 60, there's a job for you in Hollywood.

Doubles for the third President of the United States and for many other prominent Americans, as they looked in 1803, are being sought by Warner Brothers' studio for use in Marion Davies' new Cosmopolitan production, "Hearts Divided."

In the film, the star plays Betsy Patterson, a Baltimore belle who falls in love with Jerome Bonaparte, brother of the French Emperor, who is in American incognito as a singing instructor and as a teacher of his native tongue.

Many famous figures of the day move through the story. After studying contemporary portraits, the studio casting office has begun it's search for actors who look like Alexander Hamilton at the age of 47, Aaron Burr at 48, James Madison (then Secretary of State) at 53, Jefferson at 60 and Chief Justise John Marshall, James Munroe (minister to Great Britain at the time) and Albert Gallatin, Secretary of the Treasury.

Every attempt will be made to have the characters look as much as possible like the originals.

Sea Hiker Nears Journey's End

Popham Beach, Me., Dec. 28 (AP)—A fair wind and calm sea was all that Ralph Waldron, sea-going hitch-hiker, asked for today to complete his voyage from Rahway, N. J., to Boothbay Harbor by dory.

Waldron, 47 single, hard-eyed fisherman, was on the last lap of the homeward trip.

With favorable weather today he lined the bow of his rowboat on Boothay Harbor, 20 miles distant, fit the hope of finding a job for the winter.

Waldron was guest of the Popham Beach Coast Guard station overnight, brought here overland with his dory by Coast Guard truck from the Wallis Sands, N. H., station.

Waldron had tugged at the oars of his dory for many weary miles from Rahway, failing to get as many tows from steamers, tugs or pleasure craft as he had hoped.

Off the Massachusetts coast bad weather sent him ashore, burned by wind and salt spray, and coast guards hauled him by land from station to station.

Hepburn's Sister Social Worker

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 28 (AP)—Marion Hepburn, 17-year-old sister of Katharine Hepburn, the actress, is going in for social service work.

Miss Hepburn and Lois Warren Shaw, a classmate at Bennington College, Vermont, have turned to work at Hull House, Chicago, during the next two months—their winter vacation.

'HOUR' PLAY SUIT SET

Hearing Due Week From Monday

Hearing of the equity suit against Mayor Mansfield, Police Commissioner McSweeney and Chief Justice Wilfred Bolster of the Municipal Court, to permit the showing of the play, "The Children's Hour," in Boston, will be sought for a week from Monday.

Attorney Sidney S. Grant, of Grant and Angell, in announcing the filing of the injunction proceedings, also revealed the filing of a $50,000 suit against Mansfield and City Censor McNary in behalf of Anne Revere, leading lady of the show.

This suit against the mayor and censor brings the total of suits against the officials for banning the show here to $300,000.

"They will appear and answer in court and I have no further comment on the matter," said Mayor Mansfield after turning the suits over to his private law firm.

Council to Make More Jail Visits

Continuing their probe into conditions in correctional institutions in the state, the Governor's Council is expected to visit Concord Reformatory and the Norfolk State Prison colony within the next few days.

The council spent three hours at Charlestown State prison interviewing several inmates and Warden Francis W. Lanagan.

Lieutenant-Governor Hurley admitted that the recent attempted breaks at the State prison and Concord Reformatory were the reason for the investigation.

Reports of unrest in the correctional institutions due to the tightening up of parole board regulations were among the many phases being investigated by the Council.

Even Water Pipes and Tanks Burn

Charleston, S. C., Dec. 28 (AP)—It took the volunteer fire department, in full force, to save a water tank from burning.

Hoboes built a fire under a railroad tank and let it spread. The woodwork ignited and firemen were called.

Cleveland, Tenn., Dec. 28 (AP)—The fire department rushed to the residence of Paul Cooper and found—

His water pipes frozen, but spouting fire.

A plumber apparently had left a blow torch too close to the burlap covering on the pipes, which caught fire.

Missing Domestic Hunted By Police

Springfield, Dec. 28—Fearing a possible suicide attempt, police today hunted Miss Evelyn Brown, 25, a domestic in the home of Mrs. W. J. Burke, Washington road, after she left a note revealing that she was heartbroken over an unfortunate love affair.

Local policewomen received a letter from the girl, who disappeared Tuesday night, in which she stated that she was going to New York or "find another way out."

Worcester, Dec. 28 (AP)—Samuel A. York, deposed commissioner of conservation, was acquitted by Special Justice Asher in district court today of a charge of violating the law of the road.

York said he had. Justice Asher said York should have the benefit of the doubt. It was York's first motor vehicle summons, he said.

Songs in Barroom Costly to Novarro

Budapest, Hungary, Dec. 28 (AP)—Ramon Novarro, of motion picture fame, left Budapest in a huff today after bringing suit against a theater, charging that money due him had been withheld.

The theater's answer in court was that the actor had sung his repertoire—free of charge—in several barrooms, and that consequently his act had lost value for the stage.

Colleen Moore Now Tax Exile

"She believes the new tax is too unreasonable to justify continued residence here.

"Miss Moore has placed her Bel Air mansion on the market and, since the enactment of the law, has been gradually disposing of her other real estate properties in this section."

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—The doors of the Astor town house closed early today on the last departing guest from the ball by which John Jacob Astor 3d and Ellen Tuck French Astor, whom he married 18 months ago, were introduced as hosts to society.

About 350 guests attended the young couple's first entertainment, a dance in honor of Mrs. Astor's debutante sister, Virginia French.

It was held in third-floor ballroom, which runs the entire width of the white marble Astor mansion and which is one of the few private ballrooms remaining in the city.

FOLEY TO HEAR NEW WITNESS IN SCANDAL

Another "mystery witness," a proprietor of a Back Bay night club, was expected to be called today before District Attorney William J. Foley in the probe of alleged graft in the Boston school department.

This man, it was learned from an authoritative source, is related to a Charlestown man who is said to have had knowledge of the alleged offer by a Boston judge of a high school position to Joseph F. Wagner, assistant musical director.

The alleged offer was made to Wagner, according to a statement he made to the district attorney, by the judge at a Beacon Hill house party.

Although the sum of $2000 was first named by the judge for the promotion to director of music, another offer by the judge of $1400 was made some time later, Wagner's statement to the prosecutor is alleged to have said.

The night club proprietor was said to be ready to tell District Attorney Foley and his aides, Garrett H. Byrne and Frederick T. Doyle, his knowledge of the purported offer made to Wagner.

IMPORTANT LINK

This statement, it was learned, will prove to be a most important link in the evidence Mr. Foley expects to present to the Suffolk County grand jury on Monday in his efforts to expose completely corruption in the school department.

When he visits the district attorney's office, it is expected that the proprietor will name a prominent Boston politician who was to have been the alleged beneficiary of the payment, which was not forthcoming from Wagner.

At the same time, two more assistant musical directors of the Boston schools were expected to come before the district attorney today.

Four other assistant directors were queried by Foley, as well as Miss Sheila O'Donovan Rossa, Boston singer and welfare worker.

TELLS OF PARTY

Miss Rossa, who was questioned by a representative of Foley at some unnamed location, is said to have told of introducing Professor Wagner to the judge at the Beacon Hill party.

Foley would not make public the contents of the statements made by Miss Rossa, beyond that she was interviewed for the sole purpose of checking charges made to the prosecutor.

She will not be implicated in any appearance before the grand jury, Foley said, and is in no other way connected with the probe into alleged school graft.

Professor Wagner, recalled to the office of the district attorney, repeated his charges of being offered the promotion by the judge.

The Charlestown man is said to have told the investigators that he could not furnish the name of the person who is said to have tried to make him the go-between of the politician and the judge in making the offer to Wagner.

TELEPHONE CALL

Investigation by Foley, however, was said to have revealed that the attempt to use the Charlestown man as a go-between was made by telephone by a man who said he was authorized to act for the politician and the high Boston official in the attempt to "sell" Wagner the promotion.

The four assistant music directors queried by Foley as to whether they had been offered a chance to pay for the promotion to music director were: Professor Leonard S. Whalen, of Huntington avenue; Professor Daniel D. Tierney, Jr., of Stratford road, West Roxbury; Fortunate Sordillo, of Lake street, Brighton, and Joseph H. Gildea, of Creston road, West Roxbury.

The district attorney would not make public the statements made to him by the four men, nor would he comment on the statements made to him and his aides.

It was said that the judge and two other prominent Boston officials would probably be under indictment in the school probe after the grand jury hears the evidence uncovered by Mr. Foley in his relentless investigation.

Habit?

A Greensboro woman found a "postage due" card in her box. She presented it at the proper window, paid the two cents and found a Christmas greeting from J. W. Coleman, the postmaster.

FACTS

Washington, Dec. 28—President Roosevelt, in his inaugural address, said he would strive to obtain the cooperation of all the American people in a program for their prosperity and contentment.

More than 2000 suits have now been filed against the government in law courts throughout the land by American individuals, firms and corporations.

They assert that the property and business of themselves and several million of their fellow-citizens have been damaged and threatened with destruction by the program of the administration.

Legal experts say that more suits have been filed by the public against this administration than any other in the history of the country.

LOYALTY BODY OPENS DRIVE

Baltimore, Dec. 28—Plans for a nation-wide campaign to enroll a million Americans in active opposition to Communism, Socialism and Radical Pacifism were announced here at a meeting of the executive committee of the American Loyalty League, held in the Emerson Hotel.

In announcing the drive, the Rev. Raymond W. Cooke, chairman of the committee and Maryland state chaplain of the American Legion, widely known opponent of clerical pacifism, said:

"There are many citizens who have derived protection and many benefits from our government but who have asserted they are unwilling to defend America against her enemies.

"These visionaries profess to believe that war can be stopped by refusing to support the military forces of the nation in peace time and by going to prison rather than fight to defend their property, their aged dependents and their children in time of war.

"The American Loyalty League appeals to all true Americans to unite in renewed consecration to the principles of Americanism as set forth in our Constitution and in opposition to the malicious, subversive propaganda of those groups and individuals who seek to destroy the liberties and privileges guaranteed by our tested form of government."

HITLER BOLDER AS ARMS GAIN

Berlin, Dec. 28 (AP)—Informed sources, asserting Adolf Hitler rebuffed recent English and French overtures for arms limitations, said today Der Fuehrer was "taking a bolder stand as German armaments increase."

Hitler declined to discuss armament limitation with Sir Eric Phipps, British ambassador in Berlin, who last saw him Dec. 13, these sources said, and was even cooler toward old proposals for an air pact, in which he once asked parity with France.

German officials, in talks with foreign correspondents, have charged that the Franco-Russian mutual assistance pact, now before the French Chamber of Deputies, constitutes a "war danger."

Informed sources said Hitler reserved the right to decide his actions after the pact was ratified.

Despite French assurances to the contrary, German officials insist the Franco-Russian pact is directed against the Third Reich, and smacks of the pre-war Franco-Russian alliance.

'Buzzie' Still Ill, But Party Goes On

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP)—The post-yuletide children's party at the White House today was blessed with two hostesses, Eleanor "Sistie" Dall and Sara Roosevelt, but no host. Curtis "Buzzie" Dall had a cold, which kept him at home in New York.

This is the third year that President Roosevelt's grandchildren have celebrated the holidays with such a party. Many of their small friends were invited.

Eleanor Dall, now 8, is much larger today than she was at the time of the first party. Sara, 6, and Curtis, 5, have grown considerably also.

The East Room, with its white-candled, snow-decorated Christmas tree reaching from floor to ceiling, was reserved for the party from 4 to 6 p. m.

Again today there were toys for the little guests: a Marionette Circus from Cleveland, Ohio; and the near-certainty of a visit from the President himself. Yuletide cookies, too, made into animal and Christmas-tree shapes in the new White House kitchen.

2 FACE TODD JURY

Thelma's Escorts Waiting Call

Hollywood, Dec. 28 (US) — The strange death of Thelma Todd, gay and beautiful screen comedienne, was plunged into deeper mystery today as the two men who have figured most largely in her life waited to tell their stories to the grand jury.

First, grim-faced Roland West, her "very best friend," made flat contradiction of the statement of Charles ("Duke") York that he (York) and Lord Lansdowne were to be the "mystery guests" of Thelma at a cocktail party the afternoon before the actress' body was found in her car. West declared:

"I know the name of the person Miss Todd had intended to take to Mrs. Wallace Ford's cocktail party the afternoon of December 15 and I'll disclose that name to the grand jury and no one else.

"I can tell you positively Miss Todd had no intention of taking York or Lansdowne to the party."

Hard on the heels of West's declaration which threw the investigation into further confusion, Di Cicco, Thelma's former husband, arrived on a storm-buffeted plane from New York in response to a jury summons to tell what he could to clear up the mystery of her death.

His theory was the simplest—that she died accidentally from carbon monoxide poisoning.

RIDICULED AFFAIR

At once he ridiculed one of the angles on which the grand jury has spent much of its time—the report that Thelma was engaged in a new love affair with a wealthy San Francisco business man. This affair according to confidantes of the actress, she described as "the most marvelous I have ever had."

Later, before the grand jury, Di Cicco is said to have qualified this by saying:

"It may have been accident or murder—I can't be sure of course, how she died, but it appeared like an accident to me.

"I don't know of anything in Thelma's life that could have led to her murder.

NOT HER GUEST

"I can say definitely I was not the 'mystery guest' Mrs. Ford says Miss Todd planned to take to the Todd cocktail party."

Only slightly were grand jury interrogators able to shake the amazing story of Jewell Carmen, estranged wife of Roland West, that she saw Thelma Todd riding in her phaeton with a "handsome foreigner" Sunday night, December 15, many hours after police believe she was dead.

It was learned Miss Jewell told the jurors in effect:

"There is a possibility that I was mistaken, but I thought at the time—and still think—that I saw Thelma riding in her big chocolate colored open car with a good looking man of foreign appearance, a man I didn't know."

Gertrude Niesen Here Carrying Pet Cat

By MARION FRENCH

Gertrude Niesen, exotic and beautiful songstress who is to be featured in the new Ziegfeld Follies opening at the Boston Opera House Monday night, arrived here late yesterday from New York wearing a mink coat, a big smile and carrying a cat!

The luxuriant outer garment was donned to offset our recently lowered temperature and little pussy was brought as a belated gift to a dear, dear friend. The happy expression was symbolical of Miss Niesen's gratified desire to appear in a "Follies."

Which doesn't mean, of course, that this lovely little singing star isn't the "tops" and shouldn't be chosen to represent her profession in the best show of its type of the season. Miss Niesen's reverence for the traditional showmanship behind her present engagement is responsible for her joy in her present role.

Gertrude, confided her Dad, who accompanied her, was the first star to be signed for the current "Follies." She was considering an important film part when rehearsals were called, but gave up the chance for an ideal. Mr. Niesen, a very genial and "youngish" parent also added that, aside from his daughter's worship of the memory of the great Florenz Ziegfeld, she felt it a great honor to sing lyrics written by Ira Gershwin, and appear in a John Murray Anderson production.

The diminutive brunette actress told us that she was thrilled over coming to Boston (she's been resting in New York after strenuous night club and stage appearances.) Last year she spent a very pleasant few weeks here and hasn't forgotten it.

Gertrude and her dad and mother are staying at the Miles Standish Hotel where they plan a very "homey" existence during the run of the show.

"We've brought our cook and our favorite dogs (an Eskimo Spits and a wire haired terrier) with us, and expect to lead the same comfortable existence we do at home in New York," Miss Niesen said.

GERTRUDE NIESEN

Gertrude was mum, except to say that rehearsals, fittings and packing during recent weeks had kept her from thinking about such frivolous things.

Auto Hits Group Of Skaters, 1 Dead

Torrington, Conn., Dec. 28 (AP)—One youth was killed and three companions, one of them a girl, were injured last night by an automobile that plowed into eleven members of a skating party on the Winsted road.

The driver of the machine was sought by police today. Their only clues were part of a headlight, including the reflector, and a metal strip from the hood of the car.

Thomas Roache, 15, was killed and the injured were Thomas Alicata, 17, in Charlotte Hungerford hospital; Norman Robillard, 18, and Ida Perzanowski.

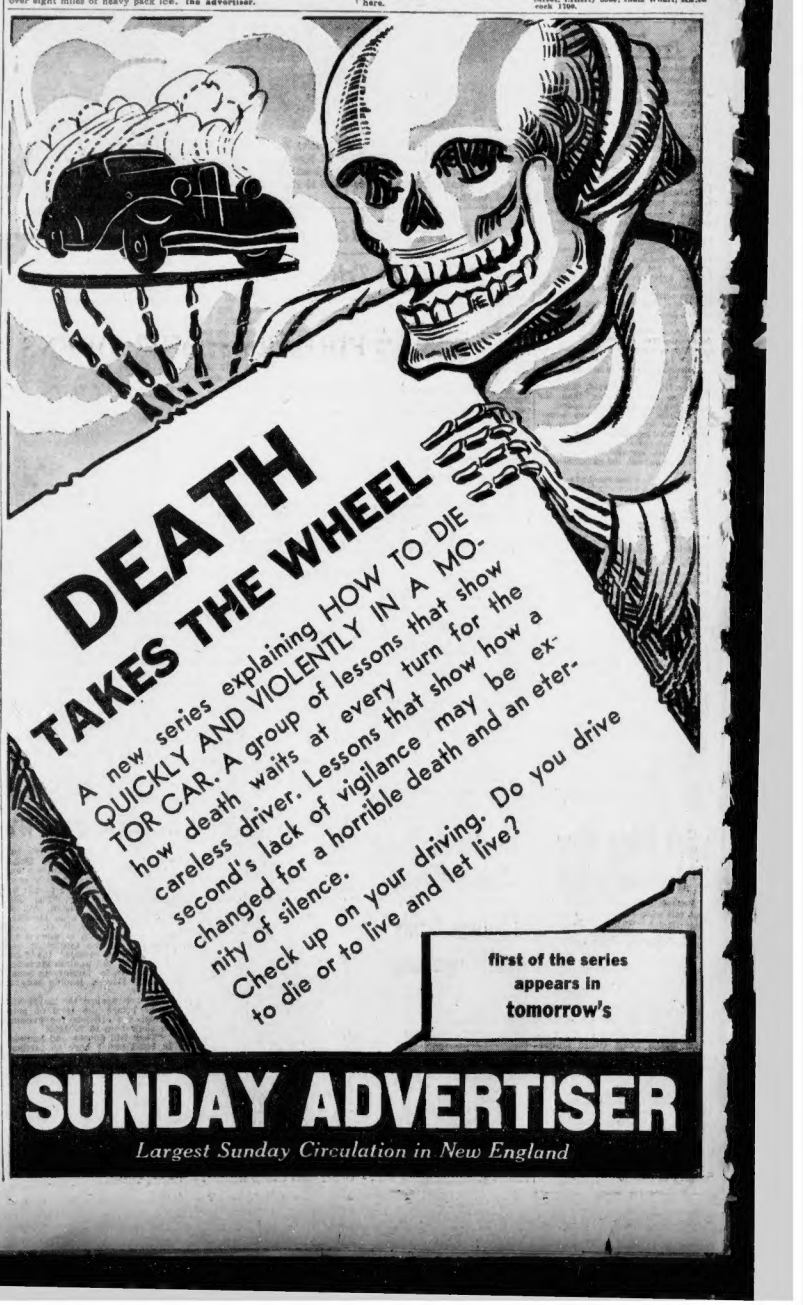

Broom Opens Gas Jet, Woman Saved

The handle of a broom with which she was sweeping had almost cost the life of a Lynn woman today. Mrs. Adeline Watson, 57, of Williams avenue, that city, was overcome when the handle opened a gas jet. The timely arrival of Miss Florence Holmes, with whom she lives, saved her life. The latter called firemen and police who used an inhalator to revive the victim.

It's a Gift

San Francisco, Dec. 28 (AP)—Mrs. Jean Schoening, a nurse, loaned a patient $5.50 a year ago and heard no more about it until, brimming with Christmas spirit, the borrower called and gave her a check for $5.

Mrs. Schoening refused to accept the check without giving $5.50 change. The check was returned marked "No Account."

KIDNAPING HOAX CONFESSED TO G-MEN BY MILNE

threw away his overcoat, brown hat and gloves," Hoover said, "taped his eyes and mouth, tied his ankles, knees and hands and rolled down a hill toward the highway.

"A few minutes later a car came along and the amateur actor and mystery story writer was found. The supposed object of a kidnaping."

Marks on his arm which Milne said were made by a hypodermic needle used by his "kidnapers," Hoover reported, actually were pin pricks.

FACES ARRAIGNMENT

Hoover said he probably would be arraigned before a United States commissioner here during the day, after the United States District Attorney had reviewed the facts of the case and decided what charges may be brought.

The 23-year-old Milne, who disappeared from his New York apartment on December 16 and was found trussed five days later near Doylestown, Pa., was brought from his mother's home at Woodstock, N. Y., yesterday for what Hoover said was "routine questioning."

Announcement of the amazing confession was made by Hoover at the New York offices of the Federal Bureau shortly after 5 p. m. (Eastern Standard Time). The boy's mother had been notified previously, he said.

"None of the other members of the Milne family, as far as we know, have at any time had any knowledge of the hoax," Hoover asserted. "They have all co-operated with us to the fullest extent."

PLANNING HOAX

Hoover said the statement was signed after young Milne had been questioned by Inspector Michael F. McDermott of the New York police, Assistant Director Harold Nathan of the federal bureau of investigation, and Special Agent Rhea Whitley, head of the bureau's New York office.

"The idea of the hoax," Hoover told reporters, "came to him on December 6 or 8."

Hoover said Milne told him this story:

"The youth went to a 5 and 10-cent store and bought a tube of mustache and a pair of cotton gloves.

"In his apartment he cut out odd words from newspapers.

"He pasted them to sheets of wrapping paper. He wrote three letters which he sealed in envelopes and addressed.

MAILS PACKAGE

"He had with him a package which contained his wrist watch and an Albany newspaper which he had touched with blood.

"He mailed the package from the Grand Central annex postoffice and went to Grand Central station to wait for a train to Albany that afternoon.

"The letter to his brother (declaring he had been kidnaped) was placed on the end of a Pullman train leaving Grand Central station at 1:00 p. m. for Albany.

"It was picked up later and mailed from Poughkeepsie. Young Milne was never in Poughkeepsie.

"Milne did not get on the train. He took a bus to Trenton, spent the night there, in fact, he spent several days in Trenton, but Lord's say where at this time.

"Wednesday evening, Dec. 18, he took a bus to Lambertville, N. J., got off there and crossed the Delaware river to New Hope, Pa.

ROLLS DOWN HILL

"He started walking from New Hope until he got near Doylestown, then he went up by a school house, threw away his overcoat, brown hat, and gloves, taped his eyes and mouth, tied his ankles, knees and hands and rolled down a hill toward the highway.

"A few minutes later a car came along and he was found, the supposed object of a kidnaping.

"The letters he sent to his family, which had been concocted in his own apartment, demanded $250,000 ransom.

"The asserted marks of hypodermic injections of narcotics Milne had admitted were made by a pin.

"As far as we know, none of the other members of the Milne family were informed by the boy, either before or after the supposed kidnaping, of the plan.

"His mother, his grandfather, and all other members of the family have co-operated with us to the fullest extent.

"Milne was brought from Woodstock, N. Y., yesterday afternoon for a routine questioning concerning the affair after I arrived in town.

NO THIRD DEGREE

"There was no special method of questioning, the three men primarily concerned in the investigation going over the story with him. I participated in a small part of the interrogation myself. He was not subjected to any third degree methods."

Charges against Milne could be preferred on the basis that the ransom letter was sent through the mails, Hoover declared. He said Milne's family had not been questioned as to whether any member might file a complaint against the youth.

The federal chief declined to make public a verbatim copy of Milne's statement, but said the signed document would become the property of the federal attorney.

Milne had been watched constantly, Hoover said, since he was released after treatment at the Doylestown, Pa., hospital, but had "not been under arrest until after the statement was signed."

TWO AID AGENTS

Two persons, the bureau chief indicated, assisted the agents in running down evidence which resulted in the hoax confession.

He declined to disclose their identities but said they were a person living on 86th street from whom young Milne inquired the way to Gracie square and a barber in a shop where the youth stopped for a shave before taking the bus to Trenton.

Hoover described the boy's work of mailing the ransom demand from letters slipped from old newspapers in his New York apartment. The notes were compiled, the federal official said, shortly after Caleb bought the paste, cotton gloves and a rubber stamp at a chain store.

The youth gave his family no directions for paying the ransom money, the demand merely asking for $20,000 and enclosing the wrist watch as an identifying mark.

"ALL A JOKE"

Caleb's apparent anguish after he was found, bearded and supposedly under the effects of narcotics near the Doylestown road, was all a pose, Hoover said the youth admitted.

"It was a deliberate attempt to mislead his family and gain publicity. He never had any drugs. He was not mistreated. He did it all himself."

Milne's "kidnaping" started with his disappearance in response to the purported telephone call from the mysterious "Dr. Green."

The letter, postmarked Poughkeepsie, N. Y., was received by Caleb's brother at their East 37th street apartment later the same day.

Subsequent notes to the youth's grandfather, Caleb J. Milne, 2nd, retired manufacturer of Germantown, Pa., also demanded ransom, which was not paid.

APPEARED DAZED

Motorists who finally found the youth near Doylestown rushed him to a hospital. He appeared dazed and kept repeating "don't stick that needle in me again." Doctors at first assumed he had been drugged.

Hoover emphasized that none of the motorists who assisted in getting the supposedly kidnaped youth to the hospital was involved in the hoax.

Federal agents rushed to the hospital barred visitors except his family from Caleb's room, and questioned the boy "as soon as he was able to talk."

Caleb said he had been kidnaped by four men who took him to a cabin near Doylestown and kept him in a stupor with narcotics.

Federal men located what they believed to be the hideout from a description furnished by the youth. Several days later, he was taken under guard to his mother's home at Woodstock, where he remained until he came to New York yesterday.

Milne Nurses Not Fooled

Doylestown, Pa., Dec. 28 (INS)—"The fellow's why, he wasn't kidding anybody."

That was the terse comment today of nurses at Doylestown Emergency Hospital when informed that Caleb J. Milne, 4th, had confessed his kidnaping was a hoax.

'Case Solved,' G-Men Note

Washington, Dec. 28 (INS)—"Solved," the notation written by the "G-men" today across the record of the Caleb Milne case, had been placed previously in the files of 55 kidnaping investigations by the Justice Department since the Lindbergh law was passed June 22, 1932.

A handful of outlaws linked with the crimes have not yet been caught, however.

Tydings, Bride On Honeymoon

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP)—Senator Millard E. Tydings and his bride, the former Mrs. Eleanor Davies Chesseborough, were en route to New Orleans today for a brief honeymoon.

A quiet wedding yesterday afternoon at the home of their bride's mother, Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies, removed the 45-year-old Maryland Democrat from the roster of the Senate's bachelors.

After the ceremony, at which Rev. Albert J. McCartney of the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant officiated, Mr. and Mrs. Tydings faced the press which had been shivering out on Massachusetts avenue.

Milne Kidnaped Himself, Charge G-Men

Only a short time ago 23-year-old Caleb Jones Milne, amateur actor and textile heir, was found in a ditch in Doylestown, Pa., taped and trussed as shown above. Today, in an alleged confession to G-men, he admits that his "kidnaping" was a hoax perpetrated by himself to obtain publicity.

Picture by International News Photograph Service.

Young Milne is shown here with one of the G-men who worked in his "kidnaping" case. When this picture was taken he was leaving a hospital where he had been taken suffering from exposure. G-men are again with him today, but this time to question him further in regard to his alleged admission that he kidnaped himself. He is now their prisoner "behind bars somewhere in New York."

were seized as they were on their way to actually commit murder.

Others were arrested as they prepared to carry out armed robbery, police said.

None of those arrested, police said, could have procured a permit to carry a gun because of records either in police stations or in the communities in which they reside.

All of the guns seized from these offenders were either procured in pawn shops, or through the mails or they were stolen from private residences, police declared.

ONLY HALF WON

Both Kirk and McSweeney realize that but half the battle is won when licensed gun carriers are easily identified, as they will be under the plan which goes into effect next week in Boston. More important is elimination of questionable sellers of firearms who have flourished under the present loose licensing system.

One of the most important steps in the new anti-crime drive occurred today, when Commissioner McSweeney ordered a complete recheck of all licensed firearms dealers in the city.

Under the present arrangement, when a dealer makes application to the license commission for a permit to sell firearms, the police are asked to check their files and determine whether the applicant has a police record.

CHECK ON VIOLATORS

In the event there is a record against the applicant, it is reported back to the license commission and then the application may or may not be rejected, depending upon the offense charged in the record.

It is now also the purpose of the police to determine whether dealers holding licenses for the sale of firearms have violated the law since issuance of their licenses.

It is understood that Commissioner Kirk will communicate with city and town licensing boards all over the state, asking their aid in stamping out this feature of the crime menace.

INADEQUACY SHOWN

The present inadequacy of state law relative to the sale and possession of firearms was pointed out today by Senator Joseph A. Langone, militant Democrat who is a prime mover in the drive for better law enforcement. Langone said:

"Colonel Kirk and Commissioner McSweeney are to be commended for the step they have taken but, unfortunately, Boston is the only city which will benefit at present.

"Under our statute, city and state officials and certain judges are empowered to issue gun permits as they see fit without reference to any state body. A brief consideration of the mounting toll of crime will reveal to the most unobserving that gangsters and racketeers are able to get firearms with ridiculous ease. It further indicates that certain officials are not as careful as they might be in issuing gun permits.

"The creation of a central body with absolute control over the issuance of gun permits is manifestly a necessity, but that is only half the battle—and not the most important half.

clusively by the Boston Evening American. The results of the three weeks' probe were also learned exclusively today.

The agency itself, scheduled to go to Portsmouth, N. H., for further work before her trial trip, is still at Fore River under heavy guard.

Officials of the yard there said that they didn't know just when the transfer to Portsmouth navy yard was to be made.

IN TOUCH WITH CHIEFS

For the past several days, including today, high naval officers have been in close communication with the chiefs of the U. S. Department of Justice in Boston.

It was learned the G-men and the naval intelligence officers have been comparing notes, and the result of their probe into the sabotage has brought into the picture the suspected Communists who actually work with the 8000 men in the shipyards at Fore River.

Department of Justice officials denied the visit of naval intelligence officials to the federal building here had anything to do with the Quincy, but this has been the policy of the government since the probe started.

Girl, Missing 16 Months, Traced to New York

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—Charles A. Neidman said today that his pretty, 17-year-old daughter, Ruth, who dropped from sight while on her way to West Philadelphia High School almost 16 months ago, was alive and probably in New York.

"But," he adds, "my wife has become so ill from constant worry that she can't understand the good news."

Neidman returned a few days ago from Corpsuan Christi, Tex., where the bureau of missing persons of the New York City police had traced his daughter.

"I missed Ruth by a single day," he said. "I arrived Saturday; she had left Friday.

"When I came home I found a Christmas card in Ruth's handwriting. It had been mailed in New York and was signed, from one who loves you."

On the anniversary of her disappearance Neidman had a sandwichman patrol Times square with large placards bearing Ruth's pictures and a description of her and an appeal for information.

"I am ever so happy to learn that the girl is alive and well, and I can't understand why she left or why she doesn't come home," the father said. "I think she could save her mother's life."

FULL TEXT OF MILNE 'KIDNAP' CONFESSION

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—Following is the text of the confession of Caleb Milne, 4th, that he "kidnaped" himself, as made public today by the Federal Bureau of Investigation:

I admit that my alleged kidnaping was perpetrated by myself. Because of my desperate financial condition and inability to find a job, I felt, since I was seeking work on the stage, that if I could get some publicity I would get a job.

The whole idea came to me around the 4th or 5th of December.

The first thing I bought was a pair of cotton gloves, at the five-and ten; then I bought a tube of mucilage and threw away the one that I had in the apartment, and then I bought a rubber stamp, and then I cut a whole lot of odd words out of different newspapers and pasted them on a sheet of wrapping paper.

I made up three letters, put them in my envelopes, stamped the address on, put special delivery stamps on, plus 3-cent stamps, and kept them in the apartment.

BUYS COAT

Then I bought a black overcoat for $3 in a second-hand shop. I took the rubber stamp and the mucilage and threw them into the East river.

MAILS PACKAGE

On Saturday, December 14, I left the apartment, went down to the hallway, where I met Mrs. Tarbell, the landlady. I asked her to direct me to Gracie square, which she did.

I took the Lexington avenue (subway) express up to 86th street. And got off and took the 86th street crosstown bus. I got off one block west of East End avenue. I inquired in an apartment house where Gracie square was and was directed up East End avenue to 84th street.

I lingered there about five minutes and then walked across to Madison avenue and took the Madison avenue bus downtown. I had my hair cut at a barber shop on Lexington avenue, in the 40's.

Previously I made up a package containing my wrist watch and one of my letters. I made this up in my room. I wrapped this in an Albany newspaper and put a little blood on the newspaper from one of my gums, after leaving the barber shop, mailed it from Grand Central annex.

I then went over to Grand Central station and waited until 1:40, when an Albany train was to leave. I took the letter to my brother and put it on the end of a Pullman car as it pulled out of the station.

Then I went and unchecked my suitcase at Grand Central station and took a crosstown-42nd street trolley over to Sixth avenue. I walked to the Midtown bus terminal, where I waited for the 2:15 bus to Trenton.

STAYS IN TRENTON

I arrived at Trenton bout 5 o'clock, I stayed there until early Wednesday morning. I went to the Trenton Free Library, where I spent the day.

At 7 o'clock I took the bus to Lambertville, crossed the Delaware river to New Hope (Pa.) and started walking on the road to Philadelphia.

When I reached afewmilesfrom Doylestown, I threw my black overcoat away, my brown hat, a pair of gray gloves and a pair of scissors and resumed walking a few miles.

I then stopped, taped my eyes and mouth with tape that I had purchased previously and then tied my ankles, knees and hands with slipknots. I rolled down a hill until I felt the roadway underneath me.

Within ten minutes on the roadway a car stopped and picked me up.

MILNE FATHER DOUBTED STORY

Caleb J. Milne, 3rd, of Commonwealth avenue, Brighton, father of the youth who allegedly confessed his kidnaping was a hoax, still remained "out of town" today.

It was disclosed from federal sources in New York, however, that the father had stated frankly to G-men that he placed little credence in the "kidnaping" when first informed of it.

The father, it was learned, had been interviewed at the home of an aunt of young Milne in Woodstock, N. Y., just after the boy's disappearance.

The father, it was said, had asked the G-men not to bring him into the investigation at all because he doubted that any kidnaping had taken place.

Since Dec. 18, when young Milne vanished, his father, a Boston flooring contractor, with an office in Federal street, has been "out of town" to all inquirers, even Boston police and federal officials here.

FRANK I. DORR FUNERAL WILL BE PRIVATE

Only members of the immediate family and close personal friends of the late Frank I. Dorr, head of Raymonds, Inc., will attend the private funeral services to be held tomorrow at 2 p. m., at his late home in Framingham.

Burial will be in the family lot at Edgell Grove cemetery, Framingham Center.

Messages of sorrow and sympathy poured into the home from all parts of the city, state and nations from persons who were the friends of the famous business man who made the "old Fuls Stear" a national institution.

Mr. Dorr died suddenly from a heart attack as he was dressing for the day's business.

MANY TRIBUTES

Tributes from Governor Curley and Governor Brann of Maine, headed the tremendous number of messages of condolence.

Members of the staff of Raymonds were shocked when the news of the passing of Mr. Dorr was received.

Only a few days ago he conducted the annual Christmas party for his employes, distributing bank accounts and other gifts as he did for many years.

SOLD SOAP

He left his home when only a small boy, and began his business career by selling a pail of homemade soap. Later he was a school teacher in Maine, and finally came to Boston after launching a clothing selling business.

Becoming the "right hand man" of George J. Raymond, founder of the store in Washington street, Mr. Dorr rapidly forged ahead in his chosen business.

His native wit, shrewdness and capacity to sell goods brought the store to the front rank in the business world.

Mr. Dorr invented the famous titles of "Toonerville" which was later changed to "Smugginville," and the "Uncle Eph Days" at the store were a source of gayety and fun for the genial head of the institution.

Today and every day you will find excellent used cars advertised for sale in the Classified Columns of the American and Sunday Advertiser.

11 Flee 2 Fires At Seabrook, N. H.

Seabrook, N. H., Dec. 28—Eleven persons, including six children, were driven out here today when a fire destroyed one home and partly burned another.

The fire broke out in the kitchen of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Austin Boyd, at Lafayette and Walton roads. Their two children, Maxine, 2, and Lawrence, 10 months, were rushed to safety.

Boyd then rushed into the kitchen to fight the fire, and was burned. Mrs. Boyd ran to the other side of the house to warn the Daw family, and cut her wrist in smashing a window.

Mrs. Irene Dow hurried to the street with her four children, Aldah, Bert, George and Mildred.

The blaze spread to the neighboring house on Walton street, forcing Mr. and Mrs. Fred Goodman to flee.

Fire engines from Seabrook, Hampton, Amesbury, Salisbury and Newburyport rushed to the scene, but could not save the building, which is owned by Mrs. Maud Perkins of Newburyport. Damage was $6000.

Rabies Treatment Ordered for Six

Dr. and Mrs. Gordon D. Atkinson, their three children and a maid today were ordered to take the Pasteur treatment to prevent possible rabies.

The order was issued by officials of the Malden Health Department, following the finding that the dog which died after biting Dr. Atkinson and his three-year-old daughter, Nancy, in their home at 608 Main st., Malden, was suffering from the disease.

The other children, Gordon, Jr., 10, and Margaret, 7, Mrs. Atkinson and Miss Ethel Webber, the maid, were ordered to take the treatment, because they were exposed to the germ through association with those who had been bitten.

HARVARD GRADUATE Takes Melrose Girl As His Bride

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

MR. AND MRS. J. REED MORSS were all smiles after the afternoon marriage ceremony in First Congregational Church in Melrose. The bride was Miss Corinthia B. Earl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burton B. Earl. Mr. Morss, who is a Harvard graduate, will take his bride to a home in Dudley road, Brookline, after their honeymoon trip.

Dedham Bridal

THE ECHO of wedding bells clanged through the old New England town of Dedham this afternoon to herald the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Butler, daughter of Mrs. George M. Butler of Dedham to Mr. Stephen Allen of Boston.

Dr. Jay T. Stocking of Newton Center performed the ceremony in the historic Allen Congregational Church where the late Rev. George M. Butler, father of the bride, was pastor for over 13 years.

Contrast

Miss Butler's gown was of eggshell satin with a tulle veil. She carried a bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

The costumes of the bridal attendants were in striking contrast. Miss Mildred Jaques, the maid of honor, wore a dress of fuchsia red velvet made with long sleeves and a small train. Her small hat was of the same color velvet and tulle and she carried Joanna Hill roses.

The bridesmaids, Miss Freda Eaton, Miss Marion Hebblethwaite, Miss Lowden and Miss Sarah Adelaide Marsh wore dresses of emerald green with matching hats fashioned in the same style as the costume of the maid of honor.

They carried bouquets of talisman roses. Miss Edith Robinson, daughter of the present pastor of the church, was the flower girl. She wore a dress of green silk and pink rose buds in her hair.

Usher Group

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Manley Butler, and Mr. Theodore E. Stevenson acted as Mr. Allen's best man. The ushers were Mr. Stillman P. Williams, Mr. Allen Whitcomb, a cousin of the bride, and Mr. Edward and Mr. Burgess Butler, brothers of the bride.

After their wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Allen will make their home in Needham.

Illness of Phelps Perils Lecture

New Year's Renewal

WE move on beyond the season of Christmastide recollecting a comment of Shakespeare's: "So hallowed and so gracious is the time."

With its Dayspring from on high to visit us, Christmas comes just in time to prepare us for the New Year. If we are indeed alive, we approach the turn of the year with the intention suggested by St. Paul: "Be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind."

Scientists tell us that in the normal lifetime we operate in at least seven different bodies, that unconsciously we renew our bodies seven times successively. We may renew our minds and spirit more frequently than that.

The religious attitude toward life is the expectancy of new birth from above. To move out of our ruts, to win ourselves free from the load of anxieties and downward drag of past habits, we must seek such renewal from God, who maketh all things new.

A racing sail boat is hauled up from time to time that the barnacles may be scraped from her bottom. These may not be at all visible, but the experienced hand of a good skipper on a tiller detects the sluggish movement of the ship because of their invisible and unnecessary handicap.

So we have accumulated retarding impediments that drag us down and hold us back. We must take a new lease on life, in order to rediscover our true capacities in living. Religiously minded people find this renewing of the mind in God. None of us can afford to do without it.

Therefore, I wish you a New Year of renewal by Jesus Christ, Who alone can reclothe us in our rightful minds, and quicken us again to a lively hope.

May the nearness of the Lord Jesus make you glad. May the friendship of the Lord Jesus make you fine. May the love of the Lord Jesus be a blessing upon your life. And may the spirit of the Lord Jesus abide with you forever.

I Want You Only

By ELEANORE MEHERIN

CHAPTER 41

Ricky called up the Emergency Service. Had a young girl named Mrs. Richard Calhoun been brought to any of the hospitals?

The answer was invariably the same. No such party listed.

Esther came to him with an agony of love in her face: She's past the baby's feeding time. Why did you need to grab him from her?"

He regarded Esther despairingly: "I can't yet understand why you kept from me the knowledge of my son's birth. Neil might have died and I not here!"

There flashed over him with this utterance a staggering image of Neil lying lifeless, the red hair he loved soft about her face. He might find her so.

Thinking only of the baby, Esther continued talking . . . pleading. He scarcely heard.

"I thought you knew. I gave Henry Mason the money to wire you. He swore he had done this. I didn't know then what a cur my brother is. Couldn't wait till the poor dead woman was cold in her grave till he runs away with his little blond chippy."

"And I'll bet he stole that $20, too!"

Neither Ricky nor Esther had seen Jimmy enter. He stood noisily crunching a hunk of French bread and butter.

"Neil wrote a letter and asked me to send it. But when I went to her bureau drawer there was only $2 left. I sent that."

Then Neil hadn't any money with her!

"Can I bring the baby's food-formula and his bottles and clothes to Mamie? She won't mind my showing her his routine?"

"Do what you want. I'm going out to find her!"

It was Sunday evening and quiet. Ricky went to the police station. He called again at the apartment house, hoping Neil, dazed and homeless, might have returned for shelter.

Or some of the neighbors might have seen her. He went out to the Woman's Hospital. Perhaps they had some other address for Neil. There were no clues.

Midnight, utterly distressed, Ricky went again to the police station. The big sergeant shoved his chair back, frowned and surveyed Ricky kindly.

"We had a good record yesterday. Real quiet today, too. Only three deaths. One since you were here last."

"Was there a girl involved in any of them? Girl about 22—red hair?"

"One of the victims was a girl. The last one—came in about two hours ago. Maybe only 19. Not yet identified. Most likely a stranger in town. She carried a suitcase."

Ricky was half over the desk, his eyes sticking out. "My wife carried a suitcase!"

"Steady, old man!"

At the morgue, the attendant said in a hoarse, gentle voice: "Don't alarm yourself. This girl's hair ain't real red. It's more a gold."

They pulled back the sheet in the morgue.

Ricky could neither move nor speak. He was almost fainting, and stood gazing in anguish at the still face before him. It resembled Neil, it might have been Neil.

Ricky went back to the desk sergeant. They looked over the long list of emergencies.

Finally after hours of questions, a clerk in the bureau of missing persons came to his aid.

"Amsterdam avenue in the Sixties where she was last seen yesterday morning, you say? If she collapsed and an emergency was called, they'd take her to the Flower hospital. But there doesn't seem to be anything listed about it. I'll call them again."

He came back to Ricky with a very solemn shake of his head.

"Perhaps we're on the right trail."

Ricky cried out brokenly: "Is she alive?"

"Yes—so far. A young woman who may answer your description was found in a state of collapse on Tenth avenue near West 55th street, about noon yesterday.

"The ambulance was called. She was taken to Flower. They had to give her a blood transfusion. They're giving her another one now."

Ricky was across the room with a half-sobbed "Thanks!" before the officer restrained him.

"It may not be the party you seek. Wouldn't your wife have some identification about her?"

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Going in Debt for Engagement Ring

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'M getting a very small salary, and suppose it's reckless to consider marriage at all.

But I am wildly in love. The only ring my fiancee fancies is a square-cut diamond, which will take me almost a year to pay for.

I've tried to talk it over with her, but she doesn't seem to be willing to accept anything less expensive. Does she really care for me, or the square-cut diamond?

DOUBTFUL

Try to talk sense to this foolishly extravagant girl even if you are "wildly in love" with her. An engagement ring is not necessary at all. It's only a lovely frill, even if you can afford it. Some of the most successful men in this country were obliged to dispense with the charming formality of an engagement ring, owing to the small salary they drew in the beginning.

If you honestly feel she's more in love with the diamond than with you, better back out of a marriage which doesn't promise very much.

TAKE A CHANCE ON WAITING

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

He's 18 and I'm 17, and we're both desperately in love. The firm he works for is talking of transferring him to another city. He will be gone for a year and will be in training as manager of a store. And after that we can be married.

I suggested that we better not have an engagement during his absence. But he refused, and said we could be married before he leaves. I love him enough to wait a year, but wonder if he can remain true. Please answer my letter as soon as possible.

K. E. M.

It's a question in my mind if a boy can legally marry at the age of 18. And it would certainly be much more sensible if you defer your marriage for a year, when he will be better able to support a wife than at present. Also, it will be the test for you two, to discover if you're really in love, or if it's only a case of youthful infatuation.

Flattery for Any Age

If you are anywhere between a 14 and a 42, there's style a-plenty for you in this many-occasion frock that's so agreeably suited to "business or pleasure."

The soft neckline spells flattery for any age, while the unusually-shaped yoke, underscored by shirring, lends an expensive looking touch that's really very easily achieved.

Pattern 9740 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3¾ yards 39-inch fabric.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style number and size of each pattern.

Send your order to Boston Evening American, Pattern Department 232 West 18th street, New York, N. Y.

Challenging New Perfume Has Rare Freshness

By ARLINE GOULD

AFTER all the excitement and fervor of Christmas, most of us are so utterly exhausted—and bewildered—that we lack our usual interest of experimentation in adventure.

In default, however, of a glorious cruise to tropical isles, where winter is softened to eternal spring, it's hard to vision anything more challenging right now than a flowery, fragrant perfume.

If we told you of the existence of a perfume with such freshness and vivacity of note as to completely restore your waning faith in yourself again, would you believe us?

Quite possibly no, yet this is exactly what this perfume does. In it you will find the very pleasures to be found in tropical islands. It is like a walk through mimosa-clad hills, swept by the warm trade winds of the Caribbean.

This perfume is soft, subtle, distinguished and most fragrant and flowery. It is the latest creation of a master perfumer and breaths the very spell of spring.

If youth is one of your assets, by all means capitalize it. If it isn't, but your spirit is still young and gay, be ingenuous and make the most of it.

Never before in the history of cosmetics have perfumers in Paris been giving such careful thought to the needs of youth. While the spicy and oriental scents are lovely for the sophisticated, wordly woman of today, their appeal is still somewhat limited.

Not only must one choose a perfume with a keen understanding of one's own personality and the effect to be achieved, but one with a fragrance totally in accord with the mood and occasion. In other words the picture and the frame must harmonize.

If you would like to know the name of this challenging new perfume with its freshness and vivacity of note, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Question: What causes puffy eyes? I am only 23, but I work in an office all day under electric lights. Do you think this might have something to do with it? How can I keep my eyelids in normal condition?

Betty L., Worcester.

Answer: Puffy eyelids are not a normal condition. Usually they are due to fatigue, and sometimes to poor health. Much can be accomplished in the way of temporary relief by applications of hot water, followed by cold. Don't use small gauze pads, they don't hold the heat long enough. Take a clean, thick wash cloth and give the eyes a good steaming. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for our Puffy Eye leaflet. This leaflet tells you exactly how to treat this condition.

Scientific WEIGHT Gaining MENUS

By MARTHA LEE

THERE'S always a lot written about the woman who wants to lose.

Doctors take grim care of the man who should lose but won't, through a mandatory restricting of his diet, and altogether making life not worth the living.

But how about the man or woman who wants to gain? Very little is said about them.

They seem to be, truly, the stepchildren of the diet regime, since reams of material are written about the fat ones, and only now and then an article about thin ones.

Worked out in energy calories, the usual diet for sedentary people is somewhere around two thousand calories, and this ranges progressively for more active people up to five thousand calories, apportioned to whatever foods are necessary, in the particular instance.

MORE FATS IN DIET

In the case of the person who wanted to gain, there would be more fats in the diet, butter, cream, as well as sugar, some pastries if the digestion is sufficiently robust, cakes, cream soups.

Plenty of iron is also essential if one wishes to gain weight; these foods are rich in iron and should be included in the menu frequently: Eggs (especially the yolks), meats, particularly liver, kidney, brain, and heart; also lean muscle of beef, veal, pork, and lamb, and dark meat of poultry. Oysters, and shrimps.

Green leaves, particularly turnip and beet tops, chard, dandelion and mustard greens, watercress, and spinach, also kale, New Zealand spinach, and broccoli leaves. Dried fruits, particularly apricots, prunes, currants, figs, goosberries, grapes, raisins.

Numerous Neuritis Causes

NEURITIS IS a distressing affliction. Unfortunately, it is too commonly neglected and becomes chronic in its nature.

Then, like other chronic disturbances, it becomes difficult to correct. With early attention it may be overcome speedily.

Neuritis is the same name given the inflammation of a nerve. The sufferer complains of discomfort in that surface of the skin which is supplied by the affected nerve. For example, if the right facial nerve is involved the discomfort is confined to that side of the face.

The pain varies a lot. It may be no more than a burning or stinging sensation, or there may be a feeling of extreme discomfort. It is always increased by pressure and movement. If the nerve contains filaments which extend to certain muscles, the patient may complain of spasmodic contraction of these muscles.

OTHER SYMPTOMS

Cramps and numbness of the involved part are other symptoms. In a severe case there may be actual paralysis of an arm or leg.

Neuritis may follow a fall, a blow, or some more severe injury. Usually the injury is overlooked, because no pain or discomfort is noted at the time of the accident. But when the nerve becomes inflamed there is sure to be pain.

Neuritis may follow the absorption of toxins, or poisons, from within the system. This may be the case if there is some center of infection as may be the case in diseased tonsils, adenoids, nasal sinuses or teeth. Disease or infection of other organs may lead to neuritis.

Sometimes the condition is caused by poisoning. It may be seen in cases of chronic alcoholism, lead poisoning and mercury poisoning. The internal accumulation of any toxic substance will result in neuritis.

FROM INFECTIONS

It is encountered in some of the infectious diseases. For instance, a victim of grippe, influenza, diphtheria or pneumonia may complain of pain along the facial nerve, sciatic nerve or some other nerve of the body. In such a case the irritation and inflammation are the result of an accumulation of poisons produced by the germs of the disease.

There are many forms of patent medicines, electrical appliances and other means of treatment which are recommended for the relief of neuritis. In my experience these are no more than of temporary value. Permanent relief is obtained only by determining the cause and removing it.

For acute pain, relief is often obtained by the application of a hot water bag or an electric pad. Strict attention to the diet is important. The patient should drink at least six or eight glasses of water every day. Avoid medication unless it is prescribed by your doctor.

DRAMA GOES TO THE HEAD

A parting far to one side divides the coiffure, right. The curls mount up to the top of the head, and the severity of the forehead line is broken by one soft "kiss curl" over an eyebrow.

We used to call a curl down the center of the head a "Thames Tunnel"; little Lord Fauntleroy had one. Today it is a swell formal coiffure touch.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

ROWS of flat waves on top of the head and bunches of tight, wooden curls clustered back of the ears are no longer condoned by the woman who wants a coiffure as is a coiffure.

For a gay Winter season, you'll want a coiffure that attracts interest and gives some significance to the personality.

It may be arranged in the manner of a Greek goddess, page boy, medieval saint, bacchante head or a modern Circe, but it should be highly ornamental. The right hairdresser will make a more glamorous woman of you.

IN general, hair is mounting up from the neck and flowing upward in soft, natural-looking curls. If the shape of the head permits, the curls are brushed back from a noble brow and scattered in charming disarray all over the head. But if your mood so dictates, a beguiling fringe can be arranged over the forehead to add softness to the face, and, in many cases, hide the severity of a too-intellectual brow.

EARS have again disappeared behind a loose wave or a short curl, which seems to be all for the best, since few ears add noticeably to the beauty of a face, anyway.

While all curls are pulled toward the face and placed in intricate arrangement about the ears and the top of the head, the finished coiffure leaves a perfectly natural contour.

Part-Score Defense

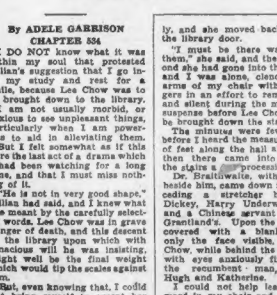

By Josephine Culbertson

Overcalls that otherwise would be undefensible become vital: bidding requirements are sealed abruptly downward.

Naturally, both partners being aware of the ticklish situation, one must not raise the other's overcall on the usual assumption of its complete soundness.

East, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
East-West, part-score ■.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1♣	1♠	Pass	Pass
2♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

South's overcall of one spade, despite his 2½ honor-tricks would be unjustified by his meager playing trick strength under ordinary circumstances. But he has good defensive strength, particularly against a club contract, if he can push the opponents only a little higher.

Fortunately for him, the missing spades were so divided between East and West as to make a heart contract in either hand unduly optimistic. As a matter of fact, excellent defense would be required to defeat a one spade contract.

The two club contract, however, was easily defeated one trick. South opened the spade King, and when he saw the dummy, as well as his partner's low signal, promptly shifted to the ten of diamonds. Naturally, when dummy played low, North did likewise.

Later, two diamond tricks, two clubs and the Ace of spades were gathered in by the defenders.

Given in Marriage

CHAPTER 534

I DO NOT know what it was within my soul that protested Lillian's suggestion that I go into my study and rest for a while, because Lee Chow was to be brought down to the library.

I am not usually morbid, or anxious to see unpleasant things, particularly when I am powerless to aid in alleviating them.

But I felt somewhat as if this were the last act of a drama which I had been watching for a long time, and that I must miss nothing of it.

"He is not in very good shape," Lillian had said, and I knew what she meant by the carefully selected words. Lee Chow was in grave danger of death, and this descent to the library upon which with tenacious will he was insisting, might well be the final weight which would tip the scales against him.

But, even knowing that, I could not bring myself to accept her suggestion. I put up my hand and touched her kind, solicitous face bending over me.

"I'm sorry, I said. "I've obeyed every ultimatum you and Harriet have issued since I've been ill, but I can't do this. I can't explain why, even to myself, but I feel that I must stay here."

She looked at me searchingly for a second, then nodded comprehensively.

"I promise," I told her earnestly, and she moved back toward the library door.

"I must be there waiting for them," she said, and the next second she had gone into the library, and I was alone, clenching the arms of my chair with my fingers in an effort to remain calm and silent during the minutes of suspense before Lee Chow should be brought down the stairs.

The minutes were few, indeed, before I heard the measured tread of feet along the hall above, and then there came into view on the stairs a procession.

Dr. Braithwaite, with his wife beside him, came down first, preceding a stretcher borne by Dickey, Harry Underwood, Jim and a Chinese servant of Hugh Grantland's. Upon the stretcher, covered with a blanket, with only the face visible, lay Lee Chow, while behind the stretcher, with eyes anxiously fixed upon the recumbent man, walked Hugh and Katherine.

I could not help leaning forward in my chair and gazing at the emaciated face of Lee Chow with its closed eyes and its grayish pallor. Then, as if my gaze had reached him, the closed lids opened, revealing black, burning eyes whose fixed themselves upon mine for the brief seconds of his passing through the room.

I had the fantastic feeling that there was a message in those eyes directed to me, and it was not for several minutes after the passage of the pathetic procession into the library that I found myself able to relax my clenching fingers upon the arms of my chair, and sink back into its pillowed recesses again.

Jim came out of the library first and hurried down the hall to the kitchen without a glance to the right or the left. It was but a minute later that Lillian, Harry and Dicky came out. Dicky shutting the door behind him with infinite caution and they all came directly to my side.

"Will he live?"

"Nobody knows," Lillian said somberly. "At least, he has survived this transfer from the room upstairs to the library down here. I think Dr. Braithwaite believes it is only his iron will and his determination to carry out his plans in every detail that is keeping him alive. They have given him a powerful stimulant, and he has reacted to it favorably. But Dr. Braithwaite says it is frankly a gamble how long he will keep going."

"You mean," I said tremulously, "that Edwin believes Lee Chow cannot live after he has accomplished the opening of Marion's lockbox?"

"I did not say that," she returned quickly. "Remember, Lee Chow himself is counting upon finding some antidote for that terrible poisoned dart inside those envelopes when he opens them.

THE SENATOR SAYS:

Manser Digs Into Snow Before A Blizzard

Fin.Com. May Find Charlie Its Chairman—And Then Look Out

THE SENATOR:

He sees all and knows all that's going on in Massachusetts politics and most of it he finds amusing or amazing, or both. Best of all, he tells about it.

Meet him below and listen in with him regularly in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

The Senator is lugging a little boy's snow shovel when he comes in.

"I see where the Governor's Council went to prison yesterday, Senator," says Timmy, who has been waiting all day to spring this one.

THE SENATOR

"Yes, Timmy," says The Senator.

"But they did not stay over night."

The Senator puts his little snow shovel on the bar.

"Senator," says Timmy, "I guess you had one of the early bids for the $675,000 snow removal equipment."

"Timmy," says The Senator, "I have brought you a sample of easy-carrying snow shovel and a bit of advice to stock a supply of the same. Some day soon the weather man will be right and all the boys will have to shovel their way home, and you will make a nice profit selling these. I do not see any signs of the $675,000 equipment."

Timmy sets up a row of short ones and a row of long ones in response to popular demand following close upon The Senator's example and invitation. While he is doing this, Timmy's dark boy, which we call Snowball, is sweeping up the joint and singing a little song, and this is how the little song goes:

"When de no'th wind blow
And falls de snow,
Mah life is full
Oh tears and woe . . ."

"Very timely," says The Senator, "tears and woe when falls the snow. Very timely, indeed."

The Senator goes into a reflective mood over his short one and long one and he is watching Timmy's dark boy, Snowball, sweeping up and singing the snow song.

Looks Like Fin Com Shakeup

"Timmy," says The Senator suddenly, "it looks like a shakeup on the Boston Finance Commission. Charlie Manser is going back in there and the City Hall boys who have been side-tracking the predicted snow storms by the fervency of their prayers are due for a lot of headaches. Governor Jim is hot after the snow again and the Fin Com is going to be rigged for a real investigation of last year's snow removal, what there was of it, this year's removal contracts, and the $675,000 removal equipment order.

"Charlie Manser and Mayor Freddie used to be very friendly until after Mayor Freddie was elected. Charlie did not get the appointment as election commissioner, for which he appeared to be in line, and out of this and other things a political enmity of nice proportions developed.

"So when Mayor Freddie started shooting at Eddie Dolan, the Fin Com started shooting at Mayor Freddie's expenditures for dizzing Boston out of last winter's blizzards, and Charlie was hired as the Fin Com investigator.

"Charlie did a little digging of his own and came up with a flock of general charges he said he wanted to air in detail at a public hearing. He talked about $2,000,000 costs for nine days of snow shoveling, $86-a-day hire for trucks, vanishing records and the dumping of 700 loads of snow into one teeney, weeney bit of a sewer hole in the center of a heavy traffic artery.

"The Fin Com said it did not want a public hearing on details but asked for them in private. Charlie refused to give them in private and successfully defied Chairman E. Mark Sullivan to make him testify in secret. On this scene, with Charlie saying he had found more than mere irregularities, the curtain fell on the snow removal investigation act and the public was left to guess what it was all about."

Snowball Very Sad

The Senator orders the same at this point and we all move back from the bar a little so Timmy's dark boy, which we call Snowball, can sweep in front of the bar, and Snowball is looking very sad, when he sees The Senator's snow shovel.

"Now personally," says The Senator, "I have always considered the abruptly ended snow removal investigation very much of the malarky because I suspected Charlie and the Fin Com were not at such odds in the matter as the evidence indicated. It didn't stand to reason.

"I figured two ways. I figured maybe Charlie hadn't found much and this was a good way to drop it without admitting so. And I figured maybe he had found a lot and this was a good way to hold it in reserve.

"Anyway, Charlie is going back into the snow removal row in a very large way—and possibly as chairman of the Fin Com. There is a report that William Arthur Reilly may resign to make way for him and that he will be designated as the $5000 chairman, replacing Mark. There is another report he will go on as an unpaid member and a third that he will merely go back as investigator with full power to run the snow removal investigation as he sees fit.

"However it goes, the whole thing will be opened up, including a new contract award to fourth lowest bidder, withdrawal of approval of this contract, the matter of advance bidding by 33 competitors on the new city equipment before the money was made available, then delay in award of the contracts. So we will have another exciting round in the go between Governor Jim and Mayor Freddie."

It is at this point that Snowball, which is what we call Timmy's dark boy, finishes his sweeping and his singing, and he has got together a very fine pile of damp sawdust, cast-off cigarettes, cigar butts and cheese crumbs from the free lunch.

"Mistuh, Timmy, suh," says Snowball, sing-song. "Ah cain't fine de shubble nowheahs."

"Senator," says Timmy, "you will not mind if the boy takes up a little dirt with your snow shovel?"

THELMA TODD
At Height of Glory

Tarboro, N. C., Dec. 28 (AP)—Speaking of coincidence—

If it hadn't been freezing, Milford Haynes, game and fish warden, wouldn't have left the oil heater burning.

If it hadn't snowed, the fire siren never would have been clogged.

If it hadn't clogged, the firemen never would have tested it.

If they hadn't tested it, it wouldn't have stuck and screamed for ten minutes straight.

If it hadn't screamed so long and loud, Haynes wouldn't have awakened just in time to escape from carbon monoxide fumes.

And if the firemen had waited a few minutes longer to test their siren—

Tax Payments Fall Behind

Washington, Dec. 28 (US)—Government spending was nearly twice the amount of government income for the first half of the present fiscal year, treasury figures showed.

In the same period income ran 250 million dollars short of treasury expectations.

Secretary Morgenthau, however, let it be known that he expects heavy income tax returns on March 15 to take up much of the slack.

The Treasury announced expenditures since July 1, beginning of the fiscal year, totalled $3,665,178,511. Receipts amount to $1,873,982,206. The deficit is $1,791,479,305.

President Roosevelt estimated revenues for the year would be $4,470,349,140, of which half, or $2,235,174,520, was to have been collected in the first six months ending January 1.

Thus, revenues are $351,475,314 behind expectations. Secretary Morgenthau claims around 200 million of this is tied up in AAA processing taxes, pending decision on their constitutionality by the Supreme court.

Motorist Again Holdup Victim

For the second time within a week, a motorist was the victim of holdup men who robbed him of money and his automobile.

Joseph LeGudice of Main street, Medford, reported to police that two men forced him to drive them from West street to the Back Bay where they relieved him of $4 and drove off in his machine.

8, Routed by Fire, Flee to Hen House

East Longmeadow, Dec. 28 (AP)—John Santaniello, his wife and their six children, driven from their home by fire at 3 a. m. today, took refuge from near zero cold in the brooder room of their poultry house until dawn, when they went to the home of relatives in Springfield.

The fire, blamed to a chimney defect, destroyed the eight-room house.

'Corsair' Premiere Thelma's Climax

Lawrence Girl's Happiest Moments at Opening

By ANN MARSTERS

CHAPTER 3

She was just one of the thousands of young girls who aspire to be movie stars. But she was one of the very few who came out at the top of the Hollywood heap.

Perhaps the happiest time of Thelma Todd's career was the evening that "Corsair" was given a gala world premiere in Hollywood.

Thelma had attended many of these openings since she had left Lawrence to seek her fortune in movie-land. It had been her fondest ambition to see herself on the screen at one of these glittering events. At last it had happened. She saw herself as the leading lady of that picture—and her bowl of happiness was filled to overflowing.

Hears Acclaim

She stood on the stage of the theater, her arms filled with flowers, and listened to the acclaim paid her by hundreds of friends and associates.

And of all the people who saw her that night, her mother, of course, was the most proud. Mrs. Todd had anxiously watched every step of her daughter's career. Throughout the years they had been inseparable companions, and when Mr. Todd died, she gave up her home in Lawrence and remained with Thelma in Hollywood.

The two purchased a home in Beverly Hills which, while not pretending to be an extravagant show place, was beautiful and spacious enough. And Thelma was glad that her success could provide her mother with all the little luxuries that she otherwise would not have had.

In the early days of her career, Thelma Todd seemed to have little time or interest for romance—although her name was being constantly linked with various Hollywood celebrities. Thelma always laughed away the rumors.

But in 1932, a young man named Pasquale Di Cicco, who was then the Italian vice-consul at New Haven, went on a vacation to the Pacific Coast. He met Thelma Todd—and once again the rumors began, for "Pat" and Thelma were frequently seen in each other's company.

This time, it happened to be a serious romance, and in July of 1932, Thelma and Di Cicco were married in Arizona.

But her romance was of very short duration, and less than two years later Thelma's marriage landed on the Hollywood rocks. She divorced Di Cicco in February, 1934, on the grounds of extreme cruelty.

Meanwhile, Thelma's success in pictures went smoothly on.

Thelma, herself, used to attribute her success to nothing more nor less than "luck." Since the day that she won the Elks' beauty contest she considered herself well named as "Lawrence's Lucky Girl."

"I AM lucky," she used to insist. "Only one girl in a million gets the breaks that I've gotten."

At that her friends would remind her that her amazing beauty and talent must have had SOMETHING to do with it.

Thelma would reply that there were hundreds of girls just as pretty and talented as herself—but that they lacked the Todd luck.

Thelma's Warning

"The failures and disappointments far outweigh the successes," she said, "and there is more sorrow here than happiness. It is only to the very few—the few lucky ones—that Hollywood brings success and happiness."

Thelma Todd was one of these "few" to whom Hollywood brought success—but it also brought tragedy and death at the very height of her career.

It seems strange, now, and perhaps a little grim, to recall that she lived the design of life that she herself prescribed 11 years ago.

In an autograph book of one of her classmates at Lowell State Teachers' College, she had gaily scribbled the words: "Live a gay life, die young, and make a beautiful corpse."

THE END.

Needham Holdup By 4 Thwarted

Needham, Dec. 28—Local police were today searching for four men who are believed to have been thwarted in their attempt to rob Philip McLean, assistant manager of the Paramount Theater, here, as he was depositing the day's receipts of about $1000 in the Needham Trust Company. Presence of Patrolman Thomas Rooney with McLean frightened the four men away.

Phone Girl Saves 4 From Gas Death

Chicago, Dec. 28 (INS)—A telephone operator today sent police to the rescue of a family of four, suffocating from coal gas. Grace Gallagher, the "number, please" girl, heard a feeble cry for help and then heard the telephone fall.

She found the call had come over a four-party line, notified police, giving them the four addresses.

A police squad found everything alright at the first address, but at the second they smelled gas, broke into the bungalow, found Charles Adair, 34; his wife, Katharine, 33, and their two children, Charles, Jr., 2, and Calvin, 10, unconscious from coal gas. All will recover.

NEW WPA JOBS AID WORKERS IN CITY AREA

With charges still flying to Washington, demanding the removal of State WPA Administrator Arthur G. Rotch, several projects for both WPA and PWA workers were approved by officials.

Rotch, in the meantime, announced that he had the payroll matter well under control, and that instead of removing him, Washington officials were "well pleased" with his work.

A total of 1040 men will be continued on the payrolls of the WPA, as $622,650 is approved for work at the Boston City Hospital.

In addition, $683,924 was allotted to projects of the PWA throughout the state. The largest of these was for the construction of a high school at Marblehead at a cost of $372,838.

Demands by Governor Curley and other officials that weekly payrolls be instituted in the state for government work were answered by Administrator Rotch, who said he had already made the proposal, but had been turned down.

Rider Risks Life On Subway Car

Richard White, 30, of Powder House boulevard, Somerville, might not have known it, police said today, but he missed death by inches on a ride from Central to Harvard squares on the subway while clinging to an iron gate connecting two cars.

He was arrested at the latter stop after wild-eyed passengers called one of the train attendants to pull the emergency cord. He was charged with drunkenness.

CANNY BRAVES MANAGER CONFERS WITH NEW OWNERS

Frozen FactS

By BILL GRIMES

It's a sound policy never to allow yourself to become sentimental, much less excited, when Connie Smythe, Tommy Gorman or Leo Dandurand disturbs the tranquillity of the ether waves, for their oratorical outbursts are solely for publicity purposes.

BILL GRIMES

But anytime the docile, retiring, long-suffering Frank Selke, publicity director and silent but potent power behind the throne at the Toronto Maple Leafs Garden, applies the "heat," somebody "ain't done right by our Nell."

The mental metamorphosis which changed Selke may have resulted from an infection he contracted from Smythe, who never overlooks an opportunity to put on the blast, or possibly it may be traced to the failure of the Maple Leafs to clinch the Canadian Division title before Christmas.

At any rate, the peaceful, home-loving highly respected Mr. Selke has suddenly turned Bolshevik.

Coach, Cleghorn and Dinsmore

Although only a few of the local followers of hockey have met him, Selke is rated as one of the best judges of hockey material in Canada.

He was an inveterate booster, always looking at happenings from the brighter angles, but something riled him and he let go with both barrels.

As an overture to his more recent tirade, Selke inquired a few weeks ago if the Maroons would be able to keep out of the cellar by Christmas.

Apparently, he was just warming up with the Maroons, for in his latest edition of "The Editor's Viewpoint," Selke opened up on Frank Patrick, Mickie Roach and the N. H. L. referees to such an extent that his crack about the world champions now sounds like a boost.

There's a story behind the blast Selke fired at Patrick.

During the investigation by the N. H. L. of the Shore-Bailey incident, Selke, from some of the remarks Patrick uttered, felt that the managing director of the league was questioning his integrity.

Selke is a little fellow but there must be some elephant in him, for he did not forget the humiliation caused him by Patrick. But after reading his opening paragraph of "The Editor's Viewpoint," I'd say he has squared his account with the Bruins manager.

Apparently Selke went after Patrick with so much venom that he was in a white heat when he turned his attentions to Mickie Roach, the former English High school star who is now managing the Rochester club in the International League.

Without losing any more time than is required to give a couple of flicks at the spacer of his typewriter, Selke went to work on Mickie.

Selke accused Mickie of souring on his outlook as a sportsman and declared that the Rochester mentor had developed into a "win at any cost" manager.

Add Noble and Lalonde

Then Selke hopped on the referees and demanded that Pres. Calder clean house. He did a job on Odie Cleghorn, who, he claimed, is far more interested in the hang of his trousers than he is in officiating.

And as soon as he got Cleghorn, he jumped on Dinny Dinsmore, "who never did show anything as a referee and should be dropped."

After this he climbed aboard Reg Noble and Newsy Lalonde for their lack of confidence, despite the fact that they were both courageous players.

Anytime Selke allows himself to get so far out of control, there must be some logical reasons for his criticisms.

There's no more level headed executive in the N. H. L. than this same Selke, and he must have been riled to the breaking point when he committed himself in such a bitter fashion.

If you don't believe there are reactions from the tosses and bumps hockey players receive, get a load of this one!

A certain player (I'll not mention his name), from Ontario, decided he'd try to catch on with one of the American Hockey Association clubs. He went down to St. Louis, where he worked out with the Fliers, but failed to display enough ability to be offered a contract.

He moved along to Kansas City but to no avail. Then he slipped down to Tulsa and again failed to impress. His final stop was Oklahoma City. After working out for three or four days there, it was the same old story, "No Dice."

Then what do you think he did? Nothing less than walk into the Arena the night he was given the sad news, hold up the box office, and wind up in the hoosegow.

Bill Grant, president of the A. H. A., not only interceded for this poor unfortunate, but staked him to his fare back home. Incidentally, you'll hear more about this same Grant within a few years, for he's one of the best hockey executives the game has ever produced.

16 Games for Olympic Six

Manager Walter A. Brown has arranged for his United States Olympic hockey team to play sixteen games before the world championships start in Germany, February 6.

The wearers of the Stars and Stripes are due to arrive in Paris, January 11, and the following night they will play Jeff Dickson's All Stars at the Palais de Glace. They fly to London the next morning and play three games in England before returning to Paris the next weekend. The same procedure will be followed the ensuing week, and then the squad will depart for St. Moritz.

From St. Moritz, Manager Brown will take his players to Berne and Bale, where artificial rinks have recently been erected. Then, the team will proceed to Germany for the Olympic games.

Ian "Mike" Baldwin has withdrawn as a member of the United States team and George Quirk, the Providence youngster, who has been playing in the Eastern Amateur (?) League, has been selected to replace the former Harvard star.

Baldwin departed with his father for England yesterday and wired Manager Brown that he would not be available for the Olympics.

RABBIT'S Status Braves' PROBLEM

McKECHNIE FOR GAME LAD

By Joe Cashman

William Boyd McKechnie, Braves' boss, came to town from ice-bound Wilkinsburg, Pa., today, and was refreshingly frank and definite on every subject but one—Walter "Rabbit" Maranville.

"I can't decide on the Rabbit's status and don't want to discuss the matter until I talk things over with the little guy," was Bill's answer to the question that's uppermost in the minds of Tribal followers.

"I read in the papers that the little guy now aspires to be a coach, but I don't know anything about that. I haven't heard from him for some time.

"When the season closed he had no desire to come back as a coach. He thought he had a chance to become a manager in the minors. I told him he had my permission to make any deal he wanted to better himself.

Hank, Duff to Stay

"What he's done along that line, I haven't the least idea. If I were to make plans for him at teh moment, it might hurst his chances of getting a better job.

"I'll hear from him in due time and the matter will be straightened out."

It's certain that if the Rabbit becomes a Braves coach, a new berth will be created for him.

For McKechnie lost no time in announcing that all his aids of the past few years would be retained.

"'Hank' Gowdy and Duffy Lewis have proved invaluable lieutenants and they will stay on the job. So will Jimmy Neary, our trainer."

N. U. '39 SIX Bit of All Right

Northeastern University's freshman hockey sextet shapes as a powerful unit, one which should be able to give balance to the presently mediocre varsity six next year.

The two best defensemen are Frank Rosenkranz of Needham and Vic McInnis of Waltham. For netminders, Coach Raymond Nelson has Bob Weafer of Boston and Carey Hohl of Greenfield.

The prospective schedule calls for games with Andover, Exeter, Harvard freshmen, Milton, M. I. T. freshmen, B. C. freshmen, Arlington high, Newton high, and Melrose high.

'HEADERS Squad in JACKSONVILLE

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 28—A light, fast football group of Marblehead Magicians will face the battle of their lives here New Year's Day, against the Jacksonville All-Stars.

Charley McGuinness, famed coach of the Marblehead, Mass., eleven seemed dubious this morning regarding the outcome.

With only 15 boys on his squad, and most of them around 150 pounds, he needed all his grid knowledge to guide his team through this engagement.

The home team was heavier and older than the Bay State youngsters, and there were dozens of Florida players available. In sheer man power alone, it appeared that Marblehead faced hopeless odds.

The weather hazard also was great for the visitors from the frigid weather from October on. north, who are accustomed to

The 'Headers were not at all scared by the prospect. Recently, after the regular season was completed with the loss of only one game, Marblehead traveled to New York to play the city champions, Curtis. The latter had a big weight, age and experience edge, yet was helpless before the wizardy of quarterback Dick Wells and his mates.

Slow Whistle Rule To Be Eliminated

Approved by Rules Committee

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—Elimination of the disputed "slow whistle" ruling of 1935 is the only change in the gridiron code planned by the National Football Rules Committee, its annual report to the National Collegiate Athletic Association disclosed today.

The report, presented by Chairman Walter Okeson of Lehigh, pointed out the members felt a year ago that no major changes were required and that nothing has arisen to make action necessary when the committee meets at Palm Springs, Calif., Feb. 14 to 16.

The so-called slow whistle ruling, embodied in a supplementary note to rule 7, section 7—the section that defines a dead ball—has served its purpose of making coaches "lateral pass conscious," Okeson said.

He declared that since there is a fairly pronounced sentiment against it, the rules would be better without it. There is no evidence, he added, to support the contention that this note is responsible for increased injuries.

Praise Officials

The note, as carried in this year's rules says: "A runner who is on his feet even though he be held by an opponent may run, pass or kick until the whistle is blown."

When it was put into the rules, it was indicated that its purpose was to make lateral passing possible when a player was tackled in an open field and that the referee should delay blowing his whistle until the progress of the ball was clearly halted.

Other changes that have been suggested come largely from isolated occurrences and are not vital to the game, the report said.

"If every time that a break in the game caused the defeat of a team we made a change to prevent the recurrence of such a break, the rules would become a mere hodge-podge of exceptions. To use a golf term, you cannot eliminate an occasional 'rub of the green,'" it said.

As to the "slow whistle" the report explained:

"This note was inserted as an experiment with the hope it might increase the effectiveness of lateral passing without producing any undesirable features.

"Perhaps it has served its purpose in bringing about widespread experimenting with the lateral pass and further development of this type of play can proceed without its aid, if indeed it gives any aid."

Besides giving the officials a verbal pat on the back, mentioning injuries and fatalities, Okeson's report brought out the necessity for a common basis of collegiate and high school rules.

The National Federation of High Schools wrote its own rules about three years ago, differing somewhat from the college code. Since players and coaches usually go on to the college game, an effort is being made to have the two sets of rules differ as little as possible.

HALL Tops I. A. A. A. ENTRY LIST

Fighting in six classes is scheduled in the Irish American A. A. boxing show at the Boston Arena next Monday night.

Competition will be held in the 118, 126, 135, 147, 160 pounds and heavyweight classes.

There will be several Golden Glove and Diamond Belt Champions of 1935 seen in action.

No youngster will be watched more closely than Gerald Hall of South Braintree, the Diamond Belt 118 pounds champion. The South Shore boy is one of the most sensational to come up in the amateur ranks in years and is headed for a place on the 1936 U. S. A. Olympic boxing team that goes to Germany.

Another great crowd pleaser is Joe Nolan of Newton, now a student at University of New Hampshire. Joe lost a very close decision in the final bout of the Diamond Belt 126 pounds class and is out to prove to his friends that he is the "class" at this weight.

Fred Camuzo, Golden Glove 135 pounds champion, will stack up against plenty of stiff opposition in his class, and Ralph Zannelli of Providence, Golden Glove and Diamond Belt Champion, is in for a pleasant evening.

FINALS To Be Held SUNDAY

HOPE KNOWLES BOWS OUT

Virginia Hollinger, defending champion, entered the final round of the national indoors singles championship by defeating Hope Knowles, 6—2, 6—1. Miss Helen Bernhard entered the other of the bracket by defeating Miss Elena Ciccone, 7—5, 6—4.

The finals will be held tomorrow afternoon at the Longwood Cricket Club's indoor courts.

By Murray Kramer

Miss Ciccone is second seeded and has had little difficulty reaching the semifinal round in the title play which is now going on at the Longwood Cricket Club's indoor courts.

She is now Massachusetts girls' champion, and last summer she reached the finals in the national grass courts championship in Philadelphia.

The Newton representative is playing the best tennis of her career, and Mrs. George W. Wightman firmly believes she has an excellent chance to bring the title back to Greater Boston for the first time since 1932 when Katharine Winthrop was champion.

The obstacle in her way seems to be Hope Knowles, who has improved so within a year that tennis experts are amazed. Her forearm drives and services pack plenty of punch and accuracy. A little improvement on her backhand and this Philadelphia girl is going to go a long way in the tennis world.

Semifinals were to be held early today. Virginia Hollinger, defending champion, met Miss Knowles, while Miss Ciccone matched play with Helen Bernhard of New York.

The committee will decide definitely today on the finals. They have tentatively agreed on Monday, but have made no definite announcement as yet.

Y. M. H. A. Seeks Seventh IN ROW

Boston's powerful Y. M. H. A. quintet, yet undefeated, will try to make the Malden City Club its seventh straight victim at the Seaver Street Gymnasium tonight.

This game heads the local basketball for tonight, but there is also much interest in the Rhode Island K. of C.-West End House tilt, and the battle over at Charlestown between the Boys' Club and the Lynn Y. M. H. A.

The "Y"-Malden game, however, has great local interest. The Malden five always does well at the Seaver street court, and last year it edged Johnny Fox's Y. M. H. A. outfit in one of the best games of the season.

The Malden team will have Elbie Fletcher, Braves first baseman, in its lineup, besides Bob Smith and Larry Matson, two former greats from Brockton High: Joe Segadelli, former All Maryland State forward; Fred Daly, former Boys' Club star, and Frankie Neale of the Chelsea Y. M. H. A.

Over at Blossom street, the West End House hopes to start on another winning streak. Its run of seven straight was broken last Wednesday night by the Georgia Chain Gang.

DON CREOLE FLASHIEST

GENERAL A IN OPENER

By Dave Wilson

(Selections made for fast track)
BEST BET—DON CREOLE

Tropical Park, Fla., Dec. 28 — Don Creole, swift-running juvenile from the Odessa Farm's stables, shapes up not only as the probable winner of the featured Sarasota Purse, 5½ furlongs dash, but as the safest wagering hazard on another difficult card of seven races here this afternoon.

FIRST RACE
General A, Dornoch, Pryor

GENERAL A, a slow beginner, suffered lack of racing room in his last two endeavors. The veteran son of General Thatcher is favored by the extreme outside post position and figures to be along in time to snatch the major portion of the spoils. DORNOCH, a smashing second to Regula BADDUN, figures close up on the strength of that most recent race. PRYOR merits the next best rating.

Dave Wilson

SECOND RACE
Quickly, Blue Day, Gift of Roses

QUICKLY'S last effort goes for the well-known Mr. Sweeney. The Smallman mare gets in nicely under 113 pounds and should prove to be all that her good name implies. BLUE DAY, a successful Texas campaigner, figures to offer the contention. GIFT OF ROSES shapes up formidable despite her crushing impost of 123 pounds.

THIRD RACE
Bellum, Flag of War, War Games

BELLUM, Ladysman's highly touted full brother, failed to live up to expectations in his Christmas day debut he didn't do at all badly in finishing third to Capt. Cal and Sandy in the swift time of 1:04 4-5 for the five and one-half furlongs. FLAG OF WAR, brisk morning worker, comes highly recommended by the Clocker. This colt displayed high early foot at Bowie. WAR GAMES came from far out of the clouds to finish fourth to Capt. Cal. He looks next best.

FOURTH RACE
Don Creole, Naughty, Galmica

DON CREOLE sticks out like the proverbial sore thumb over this field. The Odessa colorbearers turned in a bang-up second to Empty Bottle in his most recent endeavor. In front of that he was a winner over Glory Greenock and other fleet juveniles. Contention, if any, will likely be furnished by NAUGHTY. This miss was a galloping winner over weaker company last time out. GALMICA merits high figures on good Maryland form.

FIFTH RACE
Sabliin, Mountainy Man, Taunton

SABLIN on general form appears to outclass this shifty field of platers. A handy one mile in 1:40 3-5, the first six furlongs in 1:13, indicates he will be coming up razor sharp. MOUNTAINY MAN, second to Reservist, is strictly the horse to fear. TAUNTON, a trifle short last time, figures to hang on long enough to save the minor award.

SIXTH RACE
Uppercut, Salut D'Amour, Celiba

UPPERCUT came from far out of the clouds to drub Wedding Ring, Pompeus and other fleet sprinters in a swiftly run six furlongs dash last trip. The increased route figures to be right down his alley. SALUT D'AMOUR third to Jezreel and Celiba, was beaten only one length for place money that day. He is favored by a 10-pound pull in the weights, and figures to reverse the tables on CELIBA. The latter is razor-sharp

SEVENTH RACE
Dan Skilling, Stricken, Polo Bar

DAN SKILLING showed to advantage while racing with Chimney Top, Ilchester and other good platers last time. In front of that he was a smashing second to Major General. STRICKEN, second to Donnahona, is in under a feather of 102 pounds and promises to develop into the stoutest sort of a contender. POLO BAR just missed drubbing Homework and Major General, being beaten only two noses on the wire.

Howard Fit For Coast Classic

By Bob Ahearn

It is pleasing to Walter E. O'Hara these days to hear that his handicap performer, Howard, gelded son of Rolled Stocking, is turning in some stellar workouts in preparation for the Santa Anita $125,000 Handicap.

Howard was sent a mile the other day at Santa Anita by Trainer Don Cameron in the fine time of 1:44 2-5. Howard was under stout restraint the entire distance.

Howard

O'Hara has nominated Howard and New Deal to represent the Araho Stable in the rich California classic, and their showing will be watched with interest by New England racegoers.

Palumbo will leave for Hot Springs within a few days to prepare the horses of J. Y. Christmas of Upper Marlboro, Md. Palumbo will ride the Christmas horses at the Hot Springs meeting in February.

J. H. F. of Winchester asks what are some good times for morning trials. At Hialeah Park, where horsemen are preparing their strings for the meeting which gets underway January 16, yearlings have been reeling off a quarter in :22 3-5.

Older horses regularly are working three-eighths in :34 2-5, half in :47 flat, five-eights in :59 4-5, three-quarters in 1:12 3-5, and a mile in 1:39.

Psychic Bid has been assigned 122 pounds while F. A. Carreaud's Ajaccio will carry 118.

When a Celebrating Adam Meets His New Year's Eve

By M. A. WEISS

The lads who resolved to sit home and listen to the radio on New Year's eve should now be in a frantic scramble to get the black and white bib and tucker ready for celebration at some sawbuck-a-head nite spot.

Tails are the thing... Especially when there are ladies present. Tails in black or midnight blue... with short, stubby, lapels. With ribbed silk lapels.

Tails break squarish just below the back of the knee. And the coat should be a trifle longer than the vest... and without a handkerchief pocket.

Here's a weskit to end weskits. It's a backless arrangement that John Citizen can climb into without thinking hardly of Mme. West. Picque in a variety of designs and either black or white is smart... When the going gets hot, you'll bless the vest.

If you like to be different, the ribbed silk, English last pumps that match the lapels of your dress jacket are smart and inexpensive. The white buck or kid gloves, the ebony stick and the gardenia are essential accessories.

Among the titanic struggles of nature are holiday epics in which Thumb Pingered Fred puts up the battle of the Century versus dress collar and tie. We must be getting soft for the choker type collar and won't-tie necktie have disappeared.

In their place is the broad wing Vendome collar and the tie to match the shirt front. Square ends, of course, and the final touch is the gold turk's head studs.

We hear much controversy over the Derby. Our nomination in the dress stakes is Silk Opera first, and Black Homburg to place. The derby is scratched. The correct opera hat has a decided bell to both crown and brim. It should be worn slightly cocked, but never cockeyed.

Of course we can't all be Astaires, and for a corking good time, on New Year's the next best bet to the tailcoat is the double breasted, shawl collar dinner jacket. The item has a decidedly "Long Island" flavor. It can be worn without a vest and that too is a blessing. The shirt should boast a lay-down collar, and here, my merry gentlemen, you have all of the comfort of your lounge clothes, plus the formality of an evening kit. Make sure the lapels on your jacket are not skimped. That you have a narrow "V" opening at the collar, and that the lapels are ribbed silk.

• • •

Mr. Boston

Rasslers Go Operatic

—By Jack Conway—

ONE OF THE MOST unusual happenings in sports this year has been the development of temperament by many of our leading wrestlers.

There once was a time when a wrestler would step in and grapple with anybody from a traffic cop to a champion. Now the headliners in the mat game are very particular as to whom they wish to meet.

Mr. Boston

Dan O'Mahony won't have anything to do with Yvon Robert, the Canadian heavyweight. Ed Don George has also walked out of a match with Robert.

As a champion, O'Mahony has a right to be a bit temperamental, but George, a former champion, should be glad of the opportunity to battle his way back to a title contest.

The blowoff came today when Alex MacLean announced he had to call off his mat show at the Arena next Wednesday night because Count Casimir Polowski had withdrawn from his tussle with Charley Strack.

Wrestling stood up better than most other sports during the depression, because the matmen took on all-comers. The wrestlers will have to cease sidestepping first-class opponents if they are to retain their popularity and keep up interest in the mat game.

Paul Bowser, like our own Austen Lake, is still confined to his home with an attack of grippe. Paul and Austen will return to the sports wars next week.

STEVENSON

CHARLEY Stevenson continues to boot them home at Tropical Park. Last summer I was told by Monte Parks, youthful trainer, that in his opinion Stevenson would develop into one of the greatest jockeys in the country.

BRAVES

BILL McKechnie and Bob Quinn will iron out many of the Braves' difficulties over the week-end. It will be the first time McKechnie and Quinn have had an opportunity to talk things over since the legal tangles of the club were cleared away.

McKechnie and Quinn both realize the Braves need player strength if they are to get anywhere in the National League race.

The recent trade with Brooklyn was helpful to the Tribe, but the local club still needs much more player power if it is to improve its position in the league standing.

The Braves have been disorganized during the past two years, and it will require much re-building to get the club going properly.

RANDOM SHOTS

LOUIE FOX has received numerous letters of thanks penned in the handwriting of youngsters for the Christmas party he tossed to 500 children at the Revere Lodge of Elks . . . There was a dinner, theatrical show and gifts . . . A grand time was had by all the little folks . . . Sammy Fuller was a caller. He told me that he has reduced to 140 pounds and that by the early part of the year he will be prepared to take on all-comers in the ring . . . In the future Fuller will do his fighting between 138 and 140 pounds . . . Sammy weakened himself when he made 135 pounds for his contest with Lou Ambers.

Walter O'Hara has passed up the racing at Tropical Park and Santa Anita to care for business in connection with Narragansett Park . . . The boss of Narragansett will later journey to Santa Anita . . . He will be in the clubhouse the day of the Santa Anita Handicap, and as you and I, will be trying to pick the winner of the big race . . . Johnny Buckley will sail for France on January 6 to take charge of Lou Brouillard's training for the latter's world middleweight championship bout with Marcel Thil at Paris on January 20. . . If Brouillard wins, he has agreed to defend his title in Paris next March . . . Lou has also signed for an overweight bout with Gustave Roth in Brussels . . . Youthful skaters are displaying great interest in the silver skating derby of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser . . . This is the opportunity to which many skaters have been looking forward . . . There is ice on all of our local playgrounds and ponds which will give the speed skaters an opportunity to tune up.

ICE INTEREST MOUNTS

Derbyists Take Advantage Of Ideal Conditions

WORLD'S BEST SPEED SKATER GIVES ADVICE TO NOVICES

FORM

ESSENTIAL TO SKATING SUCCESS

By Walter Kiley

It took the weather man several weeks before he turned a kindly smile on our Silver Skaters.

But once having decided to relent, he has showered down ideal skating conditions, crisp, cold days and good ice.

These are ideal conditions for perfecting those long sweeping strides which are to return several fortunate ones victors in the big Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser event at Franklin Field on January 26.

The combination of vacation time for the schoolboys and girls and nights made to order for those who have to spend their daytimes working has added stimulus to the Silver Skates derby entries.

Every playground and flooded area around Greater Boston is in at least fair skating shape. Ponds and streams and lakes are equally good. Little wonder that added response comes in to Director Irving Jaffee with each succeeding day.

RHYTHM

Jaffee has attempted to answer as many inquiries as possible in regard to speed skating. Many of the questions, however, are answered best through his training columns, appearing daily in the American and Advertiser.

By following these daily articles, Derbyists will improve their form considerably.

They will save valuable seconds of time and cut much of the effort out of their speed attempts, for speed skating is like golf, running, tennis and all other sports wherein the maximum result is achieved with the least possible exertion.

In other words, form is essential to the success of any sport. There is one right way and several wrong ways to skate.

The one who best succeeds is he or she who practices faithfully to perfect rhythm of movement. This can best be learned by cutting out and studying faithfully Jaffee's lessons.

Entrants continue to send in the same old questions. It may be possible that some of our Derbyists failed to read the answers on that particular day that they appeared.

REPLIES

The Silver Skates Derby is absolutely free. There will be no entry charge of any kind . . . Trials and eliminations may be held prior to January 26 the final day . . . If so, all will be notified in plenty of time . . . However, all residing outside of the Metropolitan area will be automatically entered for the semifinals and finals of January 26.

Birth certificates won't be needed the day of the races . . . They may be demanded in the event there is doubt of a skater's age . . . But he will be allowed to procure it later . . . Any sort of skates is permissable . . . Identification cards will be mailed to all entrants in plenty of time . . . Closing dates for entries will be announced shortly . . . There will be at least two weeks more before we close them for good. But it would be well to get them in at once so that we can figure on the trials.

NO. 6—HOW TO LACE SHOES PROPERLY

WRONG WAY—Laces tied around the ankles. Shoes are on too tightly around the instep and ankles. This will bind the blood vessels. Never hinder proper circulation of body.

RIGHT WAY—Laces are tied just snugly, not too loose, not too tight. Wear an extra thin wool sock, to absorb perspiration and get additional warmth. Avoid bulky fitting shoes, too loose fitting—from heavy socks. Tie a neat bow at the top lace of shoe. Make sure it is knotted tightly so you won't trip from a loose lace.

HARLOW TO HAVE TWO NEW AIDES

NEW LINE COACH AT BROWN

By Sid Mercer

New York, Dec. 28 (US)—Out of the millions of words used up in discussion of the college athlete by hundreds of members and delegates representing several groups of athletic authorities in session at the Hotel Pennsylvania, only two lines of thought crystalized into headline material. They were:

1—A clearing up of the Southeastern Conference's attitude toward athletic scholarships.

2—A movement to modify the penalty for a foward pass hitting an ineligible receiver.

Dr. John F. Tigert, president of the Southeastern Conference and also of the University of Florida, has been invited to address today's business session of the National Collegiate Athletic A[illegible] which will hear a special committee report on the enfor[illegible] of the N. C. A. A. [illegible]

NO GO

It is believed that Dr. T[illegible] explanation of the Southeastern Conference's recent ruling on athletic scholarships will be acceptable and that no action will be taken against his conference which includes fifteen colleges, of which thirteen voted for the New Deal.

The expected blast against the Southeastern Conference [illegible] to materialize. It may be [illegible] the athletic officials were [illegible] until today's session.

The rules committee, which does not meet until February, [illegible] look favorably upon the proposal for a straight yardage penalty on forward passes that hit ineligible receivers instead of the surrender of the ball by the attacking team.

Such a recommendation probably will be made [illegible] the American Football Coaches Association and possibly the [illegible] organizations of officials.

HARLOW AIDES

Brown will have a new [illegible] coach next fall. Tuss McLaughry announced that Paul H[illegible] "Iron Man" tackle in 1926 had passed his bar exams and would be [illegible] to continue in that capacity.

The case of Harry [illegible] [illegible] will have a new head coach or a new [illegible] one with plenty of experience.

It was also learned that Eskie Clark is trying to wean Adam Walsh from Bowdoin to Lafayette.

Issues Challenge to Harvard, Yale

New York, Dec. 28 (INS)—Bernie Bierman, coach of Minnesota's unbeaten football eleven, said today he would like to play Princeton "next year, the year after or any other year." In fact, he would not mind taking on Yale or Harvard or any other leading eastern team.

"They all look alike to us," said Bernie. "They might beat us or we might beat them, but in any event, win, lose or draw, they'd know they'd been in a football game."

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

Here's another one of those microphonic impressions, boys and girls, with Maestro Gibbons in fightin' form at the mike. How do you like that stance, all you bold, brave sportsmen? Our ace adventurer seems to have a pretty firm grasp on the situation and those news flashes ought to be good!

Joseph Gore is a young commercial artist who is free-lancing at present and he very kindly dashed off this clever little cartoon for our Gibbons gallery.

Thanks, Artist Gore, and good luck to you.

A Dark Cellar--A Strange Alarm--A Fire and All Is Explained

By FLOYD GIBBONS

Publication of your story may be delayed a bit while Floyd is in the war zone, because of the time it takes his mail to reach him. Floyd asks all his adventurers to "be patient with a hard workin' feller."

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Introducing new member, Mrs. Elsie Dahlgreen of Riverside avenue, Riverside, Ct., who comes to us today with a strange tale that has all the elements of tragedy and —comedy.

Elsie was only 13 when it happened. She was living on 16th street and Fourth avenue, in Brooklyn, with her brother, John, at the home of her married sister and husband, Martin.

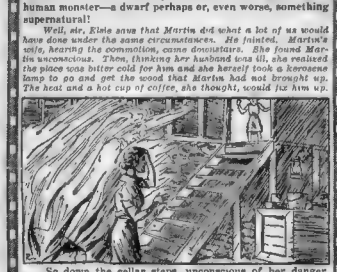

One morning about five-thirty, Elsie writes, "Martin arose and went down to the cellar for wood, as was his daily custom. He never took a light, as he knew his own cellar in the dark. He had just picked up an armful of wood when suddenly out of the dark something leaped at him! The thing seemed to be on his shoulders! His first thought was that it was a strange cat that had found its way into the cellar, but to his horror he felt a hairy arm encircle his neck!

"Martin's legs went weak with terror. He knew the family had no animal pets and, besides, this thing—whatever it was—clutched him with human-like hands. He screamed and beat at the thing with his fists and ran for the stairs. It fell off during his flight but as he ran up the stairs he heard footsteps coming after him.

"Panting for breath, he reached the kitchen and slammed the door. Then Martin leaned weakly against the door and wiped the drops of cold sweat from his forehead and, as he did so, he heard something that made his hair rise on end."

"Tap, tap, tap," came the sound of knuckles rapping on the cellar door. That knocking was too much for poor Martin. If it had been an animal scratching he wouldn't have minded. But this knocking suggested some hideous little human monster—a dwarf perhaps or, even worse, something supernatural!

Well, sir, Elsie says that Martin did what a lot of us would have done under the same circumstances. He fainted. Martin's wife, hearing the commotion, came downstairs. She found Martin unconscious. Then, thinking her husband was ill, she realized the place was bitter cold for him and she herself took a kerosene lamp to go and get the wood that Martin had not brought up. The heat and a hot cup of coffee, she thought, would fix him up.

So down the cellar steps, unconscious of her danger, went Elsie's sister. Wham! Before she had gone two steps a pair of strong, hairy arms went around her neck! She threw her hands up to her throat—the lamp went hurtling through the air. Bang!

It exploded—a blaze flared up as the kerosene soaked stairs caught fire. But the terror-stricken woman wasn't worrying about fire, she was thinking that the explosion had rid her of her attacker and she turned and tore back up the stairs and slammed the door after her!

Next came Elsie's brother, John. He, too, had heard the commotion. He came rushing into the kitchen, smelled the smoke, heard his sister scream that the cellar was on fire and then ran right out of the house. He had lost his head, Elsie says, and just started running.

The firemen and the police came. Elsie doesn't yet know who called them. But they came and they put out the fire in quick order.

Martin—who had recovered—and his wife were too agitated to explain, but the firemen wanted to learn how the fire had started, so now all hands, including Elsie, started for the cellar. Elsie was on the stairs when the next act started.

It started with a scream from her brother, John. The scream came from the back yard. All rushed to the windows and this time Elsie nearly fainted. There was John running in circles for all he was worth and behind him chased a small man with gold earrings in his ears and a BIG KNIFE IN HIS HAND!

Well, sir, everybody forgot about the fire and the hairy ghost in the cellar and all rushed to the yard. The little man with the earrings and the big knife stopped when he saw the police. Tears ran down his dark, gypsy-like cheeks but his big black moustache bristled angrily.

As the policemen held him he spoke with a foreign accent and glared at John.

"I keel him," he sputtered, "he burna de monk!"

And those few words solved the mystery!

The man was an organ grinder. John had rented his monkey from him to use at a fancy dress ball that coming night. He wanted to keep his costume a secret and said nothing to the family about the monkey.

But when he heard of the fire in the cellar he lost his head and ran for the organ grinder. The latter, furious at the supposed loss of his simian meal-ticket, grabbed a knife and chased John home!

The monkey? Oh, they found the little fellow hiding in the cellar. He hopped right up on his master's shoulder and put his arm around his neck—the way he liked to do—and chatted away about funny people who got scared when he wanted to hug them! And down came the curtain of the serio-comic tragedy of Brooklyn.

The curtain rises again Monday, boys and girls, on a new show. It's a true of a story, and, until then, KEEP YOUR SEATS.

Floyd Gibbons, himself an adventurer of note, is never too busy to listen to the other fellow's experience. He wants to hear the story of the biggest thrill in YOUR life, and wants to pay you ten dollars for it. Floyd says anyone can draw down one of those ten dollar checks, or win the hundred that he gives for the best TRUE adventure story of the month. Literary ability has nothing to do with it. "FOLLIES" And "Mid-West" Come to Town

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Two brand new items, the week-old "Ceiling Zero" at the Copley Theater, and the record-breaking "Three Men on a Horse" divide interest in Boston's New Year's theatrical program, which, for variety, is about as exciting as any major city could demand.

George Holland

The new items are Billie Burke's "Ziegfeld Follies," on which Miss Burke's sponsor, Lee Shubert, has lavished gobs of money, troupes of talent, expensive authors and composers and the tasteful direction of John Murray Anderson. The new "Follies" opens Monday at the Boston Opera House.

Its cast is a starry galaxy with Fanny Brice and Josephine Baker topping the list, and with Bob Hope, Gertrude Niesen, Hugh O'Connell, Harriet Hoctor, Eve Arden, Cherry and June Preisser, Judy Canova, John Hoysradt, Nicholas Brothers, Duke McKale, Rodney McLennan and the Varsity Eight. Most of these names speak for themselves.

"Mid-West" is the other incoming show. It is presented by the Messrs. Shubert, and will have its world premiere at the Shubert Theater New Year's Eve. James Hagan, who wrote "One Sunday Afternoon," is author of "Mid-West." Jean Adair, Curtis Cooksey, Dodson Mitchell, Bernadine Hayes, Van Heflin and Don Dillaway are in the cast.

A farm in the mid-western wheat belt is the environs of this new play, and the visitation of the dust storm is in the mise en scene. Melville Burke, a very able director, and popular in New England because of his excellent work at Skowhegan as director of the Lakewood Players, has staged "Mid-West."

Jean Casto has returned to the cast of "Three Men On a Horse" at the Plymouth, and G. Albert Smith has left the cast of "Ceiling Zero" to fulfill an engagement in New York which was contracted before he came here to play his original part of "Tex" and to help Mary Young with the direction of the play about aviation . . . News that George Gershwin will be in town Monday to watch the "Follies" premiere with his brother, Ira, the lyricist, calls to mind that the creative corps of the "Follies" includes also Vernon Duke, composer, David Freeman, Moss Hart and H. I. Phillips, the dialogue. A strong aggregation certainly.

Bright Lights on Boston Stages

Holiday Season Program At Symphony

By RUTH MARSTERS

The Boston Symphony program of Friday afternoon, which will be repeated this evening, was entertaining (if not actually light) in vein, in accordance with the holiday season.

The audience frankly enjoyed itself, responding with like enthusiasm to the Roussel Fourth Symphony in its first American performance and to Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony in B minor. Further, it was held enthralled by Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Night on Mount Triglav," and highly amused by Ravel's Choreographic Poem, "La Valse." And all with reason, for the orchestra performed superbly under Dr. Koussevitzky's vibrant conducting.

Roussel's Fourth Symphony with which Dr. Koussevitzky opened the program is the composer's most recently published work (1935).

It is distinguished by incisive rhythms, wit, a buoyant delicacy, and charm. As is characteristic of Roussel's work, it is finely written, with great attention to detail, and elimination of non-essentials.

"Night on Mount Triglav" is the orchestral arrangement of Act III of Rimsky-Korsakoff's Opera-Ballet, "Mlada." The story is taken from Gautier's "One of Cleopatra's Nights."

Chan Film at Scollay

In "Charlie Chan's Secret," which opened at the New Scollay yesterday together with "Splendor", you will find new and unexpected thrills as Warner Oland unravels a baffling murder mystery.

It is Chan's task to trace down the missing heir of the Colby millions in the new picture. Until the man is discovered, no one knows to whom the Colby millions will go. Tracing his heir from a wrecked ship from which he is believed to have escaped to San Francisco, Chan finds the man slain at a spiritualist seance. Others in the cast include Rosina Lawrence and Henrietta Crosman.

Coolidge Corner Celebrates

"Second Anniversary Week" began yesterday at the Coolidge Corner Theater, Brookline. The films on display are "Splendor" with Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea, and "Transatlantic Tunnel," featuring Richard Dix, Helen Vinson and Madge Evans.

'Collegiate' Merry Film

By MARION FRENCH

"Collegiate," the new film offering at the Metropolitan, may be nuttier than your Christmas cake, but it's just as tasty.

Joe Penner, Jack Oakie, Ned Sparks, Lynn Overman (all crazy in their own way) and two beautiful youngsters, Betty Grable and Frances Langford, join hands with a snappy dancing chorus to make this as entertaining a musical comedy as possible.

Dave Apollon and his "merry mad gang" supply the "in person" attraction. His aggregation this season consists of talented dancers, European novelty acts and clever singers. In addition, Johnny Woods, undoubtedly the best of the ubiquitous radio impersonators, presents a most interesting offering.

Penner addicts will be sure to enjoy his work in "Collegiate." Other patrons will be relieved to note the almost entire absence of his duck, as well as a gentle tempering of Joe's comic style, which is most agreeable. Jack Oakie adds his usual gay filip to his part as a "gent" who inherits an antiquated girls' school. Ned Sparks, that grand "dead pan" artist, and Lynne Overman are the other two lads who find themselves with the education of a group of old-fashioned girls on their hands.

Livening up the mid-victorian co-eds forms the basis of this picture's plot. You can just imagine what fun there is on the campus when the gals step out in shorts, start painting their pretty faces and adopt "Rythmatic" in place of mathematics.

Frances Langford has a hand in the management of the renovated "charm school." Her songs here are a real delight. Betty Jane Cooper, as the institution's dance instructor, is predicted to give Eleanor Powell and Eleanor Whitney, the screen's best feminine tapsters, real competition.

The entire program, both stage and screen, at the Metropolitan this week is light and amusing. It ought to prove just the thing for that after Christmas "letdown."

At Uptown

Film Based on Lindberghs' Flight to England

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service.

Los Angeles, Dec. 28—Undeniably one of the most deplorable happenings of this age is the flight of America's greatest present-day hero, Charles Lindbergh, and his family, to England to take refuge. Since the Lindberghs' action Congress has awakened to the definite need for new laws for the deportation of alien criminals.

This agitation will form the basis of "Exile Express", to be produced by Universal.

Louella O Parsons

I am not so sure any movie could bring about this much needed reform in our laws, but let's hope, since Universal plans to make such a picture, it will be a really serious plea and not cheap melodrama.

Cesar Romero has been set for the lead with Lambert Hillyer directing and John Bright and Robert Tasker whipping the story into shape for immediate production.

Pandro Berman is reserving all decision on his future plans until the arrival of Leo Spitz, new Radio Pictures president. Spitz, who was recently elected president under the present regime, will confer with Samuel Briskin, new production chief. Sam takes up his new job Monday and will immediately get into action and since he is one of the hardest workers I know, there will be plenty doing. Unofficially, I am told that Pandro, who made some very good pictures last year, will ask for an arrangement whereby he produces his pictures independently just as Walter Wanger does for Paramount.

If "Without Armor," James Hilton's novel, can be adapted to give the woman proper significance it will be Marlene Dietrich's first for Alexander Korda. The original Hilton story really features a man and Robert Donat has already been signed by Korda for the male role. However, since Mr. Hilton, who is Frances Marion's guest, has seen Marlene, he is very eager to have her bring his heroine to the screen. Perhaps an arrangement can be made whereby he will offer suggestions to Korda so that Marlene can have this story, which she likes very much.

Sinclair Lewis picked a winner of a title when he chose "It Can't Happen Here" as the name of his best seller. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer bought the Sinclair yarn from the galley proofs even before it was put into the successful novel class. Lionel Barrymore heads the all-star cast and probably this picture will be J. Walter Rubin's biggest break, for he will direct it. Interesting to his Hollywood friends that Rubin was chosen after he finished "Riff Raff."

CAPTAIN BLOOD

Celebrated Rafael Sabatini story told in pictures
Cosmopolitan Production Released This Week by Warner Bros.
Now Playing at the Paramount and Fenway Theatres.

SYNOPSIS—Sentenced to ten years of slavery on the island of Barbadoes, Peter Blood is acclaimed a hero, when, by a clever use of wits, he saves the island from Spanish pirates. Seizing the pirate ship, he and his men set sail for liberty, but the Spanish warship fleet drives his ship into the French port of Tortuga, where Peter is persuaded by his men to turn buccaneer and prey upon the Spanish ships and cities. He lays siege to the city of Maracaybo and by clever strategy defeats the Spanish fleet.

Hastily repairing his damage, the Spanish admiral starts in pursuit and on the way captures a British ship, aboard of which is Arabella Bishop, the girl Peter is in love with.

But along comes Peter and, again outwitting the Spanish fleet, he rescues Arabella and takes her aboard his vessel before he cripples the admiral's ship, thus preventing pursuit.

Considering Peter a pirate, Arabella refuses to be consoled by the rescue. But Peter learns that William of Orange is now on the British throne and that France is at war with England, and even now laying siege to Barbadoes.

Peter gives orders for a dash to Barbadoes, and Arabella is given the run of the ship. Donning a pirate costume, she becomes the pet of the crew.

JACKIE COOPER ON AIR WITH BEERY

By N. F. T.

Screen patrons who saw Jackie Cooper and Wallace Beery play together in "The Champ" and especially those who didn't enjoy their co-starring then, are like to relish this report that the pair are putting "The Champ" on the coast-to-coast air waves (WEEI) this evening as a "Chateau" program highlight between 9:30 and 10:30 p. m.

There are critics who have called "The Champ" just about the most outstanding character portrayal on record in the colorful career of Wallace Beery. Offhand, there doesn't come to mind that he ever gave his dramatic talent to a more impressive effort. This is the final appearance on that hour by Beery. Next week will find the mammy man Al Jolson back on the job.

Charles further hints how his head man, Mr. Melville D. Liming, the C of C General Secretary, claims the forthcoming 1936 has more in store than the average individual realizes.

Dr. Serge Koussevitzky will present two novelties in the broadcast by the Boston Symphony Orchestra this evening (WBZ) from 8:15 to 9:15.

He offers radio listeners the American premiere of a new symphony by a noted French contemporary, Albert Roussel's recently completed fourth opus in this form, and a concert version of the third act of Rimsky-Korsakoff's little-known opera, "Mlada." This work, like the Russian composer's "Coq d'Or," is a fairy-tale fantasy written to be sung by a cast of singers and enacted by the corps de ballet.

Quaint and ancient ceremonies of the Indian New Year and the annual all-march program by the big concert band, directed by Edward d'Anna, will share the spotlight during the weekly program (WNAC) heard again tonight at 7:30 p. m.

Narrator Francis Bowman plans to describe the picturesque observance of Ga-na-yas-o, the Indian New Year, which is still carried on as it has been for hundreds of years, by the followers of Gan-e-di-o, prophet of the Senecas.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS—TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS

Under the guidance of Ben Newell of the Y. M. C. A. at Berlin, N. H., a new squadron of Junior Birdmen is expected to be organized soon.

Five senior members of the Wiley Post Model Airplane Club, sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. and directed by Newell, have joined the Boston wing and are expected to be the charter members of a new flight unit.

The five are: John Cross, 16, and Donald Cross, 10, of 421 High street, Raymond Ellis, 15, of 341 Willard street, Donald Graves, 16, of 386 High street and B. A. Newell, 19, of 12 Cambridge street, all of Berlin.

Donald Graves is flight commander of this club and John Cross and Raymond Ellis are lieutenants. The club uses the "Y" gymnasium for flying and testing their models.

Albert H. Meryman, commander of Squadron 29 of Winthrop, has answered the challenge of the club commanded by William Shea for a contest at South Armory. Albert says his squadron "will show the 'over-confident' English High School unit how scale and other models should be constructed and flown."

Meryman's group also extends the season's greetings to all Junior Birdman and to wing headquarters.

A novel idea used by the Leaping Lenas of Everett which finds unanimous favor is recommended to all squadron commanders looking for new activities. The plan operates like the old-fashioned "spelling bee." Captains are selected and they in turn choose their "sides."

The sponsor or commander of the squadron then submits words and terms from the Junior Birdmen Air Dictionary for correct definition, giving each member a chance to answer. An incorrect answer "washes out" the member. The "side" remaining on its feet the longest wins the game.

B. & M. REPORTS

November OPERATING Income

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

Despite several extraordinary items that becloud the November operating statement, the Boston & Maine Railroad turned in a favorable performance for the month.

All classes of revenue showed increases over last year during the month. While a deficit is shown for the 11 months of 1935, it is smaller than that reported for the 1934 period.

Net income of $37,911 over and above fixed charges is reported for November. This compares with $234,685 last year. But the 1934 report included a credit adjustment in operating expenses in connection with the large expenditures made with PWA funds, which naturally increased the net income figure.

November revenues showed an increase amounting to $189,596.45 over last November and operating expenses for the month exceeded those of 1934 by $353,989.84. But in this last named item the PWA credit must again be allowed for, although some of the increase was due to added costs of materials and supplies as well as a restoration of wage cuts in effect in 1934. For the month freight revenue gained $163,546.47 over last year as passenger revenues increased $23,075.96 and express revenues were up $26,143.44. Deficit shown for the first 11 months of 1935 totalled $348,063.32, as compared with a deficit of $405,456.44 for the same 1934 period.

This and That—It was certainly good news for Radio stockholders that Joseph P. Kennedy would immediately undertake a study of the company's capital structure . . . That in itself is enough to give them new confidence and attract a fresh following for the stocks . . . And the acceptance of R-K-O's presidency by Merlin H. Aylesworth will strengthen hopes the movie company is staging a good comeback . . . Such important steps toward reconstruction by private enterprise embolden those who see better times ahead.

More and more the tax collector is blamed for prevailing irregularity in the stock market. Sales to establish profits or losses as the year winds to an end are credited with weakness here and there. And strangely enough, this year strength in various quarters is attributed to the same source. For it is said that some sellers, instead of waiting for the lapse of the required period to repurchase securities sold, are placing their funds elsewhere immediately. Thus switching instead of straight selling characterizes the year-end period.

Here and There: Regardless of the factors making for irregular price movements we are impressed by the lack of pressure on the list . . . Declines do not bring out stock in volume . . . And with due allowance for the tax selling in market calculations we incline toward previously stated opinions . . . A bone-crushing attack on recent lows, however, that meets with failure will foster a more positive bullish attitude . . . Since it is obviously impossible to take a strong hand on negative happenings that are susceptible to cheerful interpretation.

ANOTHER Series of BATTLES

INVOLVING GOLD POLICIES

By William S. Neal
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Dec. 28—As the January 1 deadline neared, the government today was faced with another series of legal battles involving the famous gold seizure and devaluation policies of the Roosevelt administration.

The issues raised in the suits may pave the way for another series of historic decisions by the Supreme Court on the power of Congress to repudiate gold obligations and perhaps involve huge sums.

One law suit, it was learned, will be filed before the deadline in which constitutionality of gold devaluation as applied to bonds owned by foreigners is raised.

This issue was specifically avoided when the supreme court held that Congress had power to abrogate gold clause bonds in private, state and municipal contracts, and held abrogation unconstitutional as to government bonds, but denied relief.

The demand will be made in the foreign suit that the United States pay $1690 for every $1000 U. S. gold bond, because of gold devaluation.

At the same time the government won an important step in the suit instituted in the court of claims by Robert A. Taft of Cincinnati, son of the late President William Howard Taft, in which he attempted to raise again the constitutionality of gold bond abrogation.

Report Filed

A rport was filed by Commissioner C. W. Ramseyer in the Dixie terminal case brought by Taft Holding that a $50 bond on which he hoped to raise the issue was overdue on April 15, 1934.

The bond owned by the Dixie Terminal Company was called for redemption by the treasury, which refused a demand to redeem in gold, on October 15, 1934. The government claimed that since the bond was overdue in April of that year the company did not have a valid claim.

In another suit filed in the Court of Claims Hugh M. Anderson, New York lawyer, demanded the treasury redeem bonds in gold or pay damages.

He claimed either gold or the difference in purchasing power at the time of purchase and call of the bond. He demanded a total of $179,385 damages.

In a rush to beat the deadline, voted by Congress at the last session to prevent gold devaluation suits from piling up, ten gold mining companies filed suit for damages.

Among them were King Solomon Mines Company, Lagrange Gold Dredging Company, and Alaska Juneau Gold Mining Company.

They contend they surrendered newly mining gold to the government under the gold seizure orders issued shortly after President Roosevelt took office. While they were paid the old rate of $20.67 an ounce, they claim they should have received the world price, which was about $32 at the time.

Idle Bank Reserves Down 10 Million

Increased emissions of $89,000,000 in circulating money incident to the Christmas holiday was largely offset in the week's money movements by a further inflow of gold and the putting out of additional credit by reserve banks, resulting in only a moderate decrease ($10,000,000) in excess reserves of member banks. As of December 24, surplus funds $2,710,000,000.

Gold stocks were augmented by $16,000,000 to $10,114,000,000. Member bank reserve balances were down $8,000,000, while Treasury cash and deposits with Reserve institutions decreased $5,000,000.

Reporting member banks in New York City disclosed a decrease in outstanding credit of $38,000,000, caused largely by a lightening in portfolios of direct United States Governments, and a reduction in commercial loans. Governments were down $37,000,000 and "other," or commercial advances, $17,000,000.

As opposed to these reductions in credit, loans on real estate were up $4,000,000; holdings of fully guaranteed obligations $6,000,000, and of securities other than Governments, $10,000,000.

RAIL SHARES HOLD FIRM

New York, Dec. 28—A few of the rails and specialties provided the firm spots in today's stock market. At the same time quiet realizing pushed back a number of issues.

In the upper brackets were Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Union Pacific, Auburn, Radio, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Douglas Aircraft, Woolworth and Public Service of New Jersey.

A slightly lower trend was shown by American Telephone, U. S. Steel, Consolidated Gas, Chrysler, General Motors, Loew's, Westinghouse, Eastman Kodak, International Nickel and General Electric.

Many traders were absent from the boardrooms and the turnover was small, even for Saturday.

Current Factors

The attention of financial observers appeared to be divided between the tense European situation and optimistic economic developments at home.

Satisfaction was expressed with the construction award figures for the first half of December. These indicated building operations spurted to three times the total of the 1934 period. Speeding up of government projects, however, helped swell the aggregate.

Trade analysts noted that retail buyers now entering the primary markets are experiencing some difficulty in obtaining needed quantities of clearance merchandise for special January sales.

Railroad equipment makers were sharpening their pencils for early spring orders from the major carriers. These estimated possible purchases during the coming year of some 40,000 new freight cars if car loadings improvement come up to expectations.

The French franc, at the start of foreign exchange transactions, was off .00½ of a cent at 6.58½ cents and sterling was up ¼ of a cent at $4.93¾.

Record Nickel Use Indicated for 1935

Statistics for the first 10 months of 1935 indicate that the current year's business will be the largest in the history of the nickel industry, according to R. C. Stanley, president of International Nickel Co. of Canada, Ltd.

Within those 10 months, world consumption of nickel in all forms totaled 133,300,000 pounds, against 112,481,600 pounds in first 10 months of the previous peak year, 1929, and 102,780,000 pounds in the like 1934 period.

Although this further increase in consumption undoubtedly reflects a tendency among certain world powers to strengthen their metal reserves, Mr. Stanley stated that an analysis of world nickel consumption definitely shows that the great bulk of the metal continued to move directly into established peace-time needs.

Reports from all centers indicate a general restocking of bins and replacement of obsolete equipment.

A general trend has been noticed in the various fields of industry to specify better grades of materials in the machinery and equipment now being ordered for replacement purposes.

More passengers were carried this year than last year in November. The total for November, 1935, was 23,159,081 compared with 22,872,495 in November, 1934.

Respective totals for the eight months' periods were 178,314,019 for 1935 and 175,021,617 for 1934.

RISING RATE OF

Federal TAXES NEW Problem

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service.)

New York, Dec. 27 (US) — The rebirth of business profits—and the increased rate of federal taxation on business profits, which goes into effect in 1936—raises important problems for executives.

Parenthetically, it is encouraging that the decisions now relate to business behavior in a black ink period, after the prolonged red ink interlude.

Specifically, federal imposts will next year run as high as 15 per cent on corporate profits, plus a graduated excess profits tax running as high as 12 per cent in addition.

In other words, the top layers of income of the most prosperous companies will be subject to a maximum federal levy of 27 per cent, compared with a maximum of 13¾ per cent income tax plus a 5 per cent excess profits tax this year, making a total of 18¾ per cent.

From a practical standpoint, this rising rate of federal exactions alters the problems of corporate directors and executives, especially when they come to decide as to the wisdom of creating additional expenses.

At this stage, corporate managers will realize that to the extent that additional expenditures are made the federal government, which is a dead partner in all business, will in effect make a contribution of 27 cents out of every dollar so spent.

If the additional expenditure is wasteful or unwarranted, the corporation will be frittering away 73 cents of the stockholders' money.

On the other hand, if the funds are wisely invested in building up good will and in expanding the prestige of the enterprise at the market-place, the outlay is made the more attractive because of the governmental contribution in the form of taxes which it foregoes.

Back in 1918 to 1920, the still higher federal excess profits tax then prevailing, acting as a similar motive in business thinking, inaugurated the modern cycle of large scale advertising.

The new tax and profit situation gives an additional incentive for investment in advertising.

In effect, the federal government provides a hidden subsidy to advertisers running as high as 27 per cent.

This results from the fact that additional legitimate expenses, which may create permanent benefits, may be deducted from the reported net income figure, which is subjected to increasing taxation.

With industry in general overequipped for the current volume of trade, which is still subnormal, there is no incentive to hoard profits in order to create a capital fund out of which huge additional investments in expanded capacity could be made.

On the contrary, the more immediate need is to expand the gross volume of sales so that existing capacity and existing overhead can be spread over a large number of units.

When the national income was declining as deflation was proceeding headlong, the sales-minded executive met almost insuperable barriers.

But at this juncture family incomes are recovering.

Not only is the total fund available for spending increasing, but the will to spend in likewise growing.

Moreover, in the inventories of consumers there is an accumulated six years' shortage.

With such an economic setting, oral and printed salesmanship becomes an uncommonly potent influence for restoring economic balance and national prosperity.

To cap the climax, the prodigal and paternalistic Uncle Sam—perhaps unwittingly—in effect provides an enormous concealed subsidy to advertisers, running up to 27 per cent.

Apparently advertisers and vendors of advertising space are not awake to the nature of this invisible benefit.

Through the taxing power, the government has become a special partner of all business.

It participates in profits—through the income and excess profits tax, not to speak of sundry excise imposts.

Accordingly, the Government has a direct interest in not killing the goose that lays the golden eggs.

A farseeing government would recognize the necessity of effective promotion of the reputation and standing with consumers of the corporate taxpayer so that it can continue through the years to remain in robust condition for the tax pluckers.

WHOLESALE Commodities Off

During the third week of December wholesale commodity prices declined ⅛ of 1 per cent, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported. The decrease brought the commodity index to 80.4 per cent of the 1926 average and offset the advances in commodity prices made since the middle of November.

The general index is now 7-10ths of 1 per cent below the year's high point in the week of September 28.

EDITH MAXWELL'S OWN STORY

Edith Maxwell, in this chapter of her interesting life story, takes her readers up to her first year in the East Radford State Teachers' College. Her trip to East Radford marked the first time in her life that she had ever been out of her native Wise County hills.

She is the 21-year-old Cumberland mountain school teacher who was convicted of murdering her father, Trigg Maxwell, with a high-heeled slipper. She began to write her own life story in her jail cell at Wise, Va., awaiting efforts to win her a new trial.

Her story is brought to you exclusively, day by day, in the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser.

By Edith Maxwell

CHAPTER 13

My parents decided for me that I was to become a school teacher. Yes. But they didn't decide how I was going to raise the money to go to college. That was a problem that fell to me. The sum of at least $700 was essential. What a problem!

But it had been the practice in the past for the state of Virginia to loan money to deserving high school graduates who desired to further their education.

Dr. J. P. McConnell, dean of the East Radford State Teachers' College, I was informed, might be able to help or advise me on the subject. So I wrote to him.

And had it not been for the kind Dr. McConnell, I would have undoubtedly experienced a great deal more difficulty than I did. He replied to my letter and offered to loan me a part of the sum I needed—enough to cover tuition.

But where was I going to raise the other $350?

I spent a good part of the summer worrying about that. There weren't many persons in "The Pound" with $350 to their names, let alone with $350 to loan. Large families were the custom. And nearly everyone I knew was struggling along.

But there was Aunt Lockie Maxwell, my father's sister. She had never married. And she earned a comfortable income for herself as postmistress at the postoffice in Jenkins, Ky.

"Heart of Gold"

I visited Aunt Lockie and, after much embarrassed hemming and hawing, came to the point. About a loan of $350.

Aunt Lockie may be a little severe in appearance. But she has a heart of gold. I was always fond of her even as a child. She said not to worry any longer. She would be honored to loan me $350 to go away to college, and that I need not fret too much about having to pay it back all at once.

Today one of the many things that bother me most is that the bulk of these two $350 loans has not been paid back. To be sure during the year I taught I made regular payments, and some of it is paid off.

And at this point I am going to let you all in on a little secret. Even though I was a full-fledged school teacher with a school of my own, I still cherished the hope that some day, somehow, I would be able to take up nursing.

I always planned that just as soon as I had paid off those two debts that I would leave "The Pound" and do what I had always wanted to do. And even though I am behind bars today that thought still is uppermost in my mind. I want to pay off those debts and take up nursing.

Is Justice "Blind"

I cannot bring myself to believe that Justice is so blind as to permit a girl like myself to spend 25, or even 12, years in jail . . . for what I did. I had no intention in the world of killing my father.

I never even had, or expressed, a desire to kill him, as witnesses testified against me and the prosecution claimed. It all seems so awful . . . so unbelievable—the tragedy, my being clapped in jail, the trial. Just a nightmare.

To get on with my story: By fall the loans had all been arranged for. And so had my registration at college. Then, once again, the old worry about clothes came up.

Fearful of Scorn

My heart sank when I contemplated the few shabby, worn dresses and underthings that I must make the best of at college. How would I be able to face other girls who had been accustomed to so much more than I? What would they think of me?

But with an effort I put all of these things out of my mind. I told myself that I was going away to college, not to enter a fashion or a beatuy contest, but to get an education.

What little money the family was able to scrape up for me I had to use for train fare to East Radford. One of the town boys drove me to Norton, where I caught the train that would take me to the college town. Of course, word had traveled up and down the Pound River that Edith Maxwell was leaving town for East Bradford. It was almost like mental telepathy.

As I rode along with my small suitcase perched on my lap folks here and there along the route to Norton stuck their heads out of their doors to wave goodbye to me. And I could see them turn and call in through the door:

Painfully Shy

It was my first time away from home. I had never known what it was to be shy before. I was painfully shy.

Things were made a little easier. Because they assig d to me as my room mate during that first quarter my cousin, Ruth Baker. She was the girl who later testified against me in court.

My next room mate was a girl from Dublin, Va., nearly a hundred miles from Pound. Her name was Louise Greever. I became very fond of Louise. But I began to chum with Katherine Green from Norton. We discovered that we each knew the same people and that our ideas were the same in many respects.

And my friendship with Katherine Greene was one of the finest things in my life. It still is. For Katherine is the only friend I have left, outside of certain immediate members of my family. In spite of what has happened to me, Katherine still remains a staunch friend.

$281,000,000 Lost In Cotton, Says Cox

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—Operation of the agricultural adjustment administration has forced thousands of laborers onto relief rolls in cotton growing states, Dr. A. B. Cox, director of the Bureau of Business Research, University of Texas, told the American Statistical Association here today.

"The cotton control program the last three years has caused losses of $281,000,000 to unskilled laborers and tenant farmers," said Dr. Cox.

"Stripped of its frills the program is an attempt to bring about a redistribution of wealth by forcibly slowing down production."

Labor Attacks Shoe Companies

Airing of charges that officials of the Ansin and Answelt Shoe Companies of Athol have violated the Wagner-Connery labor bill will be heard at the Worcester Postoffice building Monday morning.

Employes of the companies, represented by the Shoe Workers' Protective Union, accuse the firm of unfair labor practices.
